PM Calls for Sustainable Growth, Assures Economic Recovery

● "We have inexhaustible natural resources and brilliant human minds," said Shehzad

KARACHI

Prime Minister Shehzad Sharif inaugurated the ceremony at the Pakistan Stock Exchange by ringing the gong, marking his first visit to the country's financial hub's premier exchange.

Addressing attendees, he emphasised that successes are the result of teamwork, stability, and growth for Pakistan's economic future.

The PM highlighted that Pakistan has achieved macroeconomic stability, which now needs to be converted into sustainable economic growth. "Stability is a milestone, but our real goal is economic growth," he remarked, adding that Pakistan's economy had stood back on its feet.

"We now have to move towards economic growth, which requires the best teamwork and hard work."

He announced that the recently launched Uran Pakistan Program was aimed at fostering economic development and social prosperity. "The program will lead us on a journey of progress and prosperity, combining Pakistan's talent, natural resources, and hard work," he said.

Shehzad further remarked that things will heat up as the country moves towards growth. "We will have to manage these things," he added.

Praising Karachi as the commercial, financial, and export hub of Pakistan, PM Shehzad noted the city's resurgence as a beacon of economic activity. "Once upon a time, the lights of Karachi were dimmed, but now they shine brightly again," he said, reiterating Karachi's critical role in the nation's economic revival.

"I will invite experts soon and listen to their sweet, sour, and bitter things. Those who say everything is fine live in a fool's paradise," the PM maintained.

Addressing Pakistan's financial challenges, PM Shehzad Sharif reaffirmed the government's commitment to fulfilling promises made to the International Monetary Fund (IMF). However, he expressed his aspiration to reduce reliance on the IMF in the future. "We will bid farewell to the IMF when the time comes," he stated.

He questioned how it was possible to have a begging bowl in one hand and atomic power in the other. "Can fire and water ever become one?" he asked.

Drawing parallels with nations like Germany and Japan, which rose from the ashes of World War II to achieve remarkable progress, PM Shehzad Sharif underscored the importance of learning from history. "Pakistan must restore its honour among the nations of the world," he urged.

"We have inexhaustible treasures and human brain. Pakistan will survive until the end of time, so it has to be strengthened," Shehzad insisted.

The PM called for collective effort and realistic planning to achieve economic growth, emphasizing the need to confront both strengths and weaknesses with honesty. "Facts, good or bad, must be acknowledged if we are to move forward," he said, adding that there were natural resources worth trillions of dollars.

Investors, he added, are pivotal to Pakistan's development and must be supported through policy consistency and teamwork. "We have inexhaustible treasures and brilliant human minds, and together we will ensure that Pakistan thrives till the end of time," he concluded.

He said that Shehzad Sharif led PDM government steered the country out of serious economic challenges and today we are among the rapidly stabilizing economies.

The prime minister always focus on practical approach and implementation of policies and the country is moving ahead under his able leadership, he said and anticipated that situation will further ameliorate in the coming years.

The federal minister for finance and revenue Muhammad Aurangzeb reflecting on sizable improvements in economic indicators said that government is actively pursuing its agenda of decreasing inflation, supporting export led growth and bringing reforms in tax, energy, public sector entities, pensions, civil service and other important sectors.

The finance minister also spoke on right sizing initiatives aimed at improving service delivery and cutting down expenditures of federal as well as provincial governments and said that the much needed structural reform were being implemented in a phased manner.

He felicitated the PSX on remarkable performance and underscored the importance of capital and monetary markets in sustainable development of a country. The finance minister also assured to start pre-budget consultation with all the stakeholders in the coming month so that their proposals could be acquired and incorporated in budget making process.

Chief Executive Officer Pakistan Stock Exchange Farukh Sabzwari, in his welcome address highlighted exceptional performance of PSX, China's strategic investment and partnership, key features and proposals for further growth of the capital market.

Later, the Prime Minister Shehzad Sharif, along with DPM Ishaq Dar, Finance Minister Aurangzeb, CM and Governor Sindh, chairperson and CEO of PSX struck the gong to mark the remarkable performance of PSX.

FM Aurangzeb highlighted the progress made through the IMF agreement, which had provided economic stability, and noted that reforms in struggling public-sector institutions were underway.

He also pointed to the digitalisation efforts at the Federal Board of Revenue (FBR), the need for reforms in the energy sector, and the introduction of structural reforms to improve the country's infrastructure.

FM Aurangzeb emphasized that the federal government's efforts to reduce expenses were also making a difference in improving economic conditions.

Imran Khan's difficulties result of his own making, says Maryam

● CM Punjab urges students not to go against country

TAHIR CH.

LAHORE

Punjab Chief Minister Maryam Nawaz on Wednesday launched a fresh tirade against incarcerated Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) founder Imran Khan, saying that the difficulties being faced by the former prime minister were the result of "his own doings".

"How can a person who uses youth as political fuel fall asleep," he provincial chief executive said while addressing the Honhaar Scholarship Program ceremony in Sargodha.

Urging the students not to go against the country "under any circumstances", she said that someone "who asks you to siege and arson is not your friend".

"His [Imran] own children were sitting outside [and] he is asking others to vandalise and spread anarchy," Maryam said, referring to the events of May 9, 2023 and the "final call protest" on November 26.

Khan, who remains behind the bars in Adiala jail, and several others are facing various allegations in the cases related to the violence following his arrest on May 9.

The vandalism was followed by the PTI founder's arrest on the aforementioned date in 2023 during which party workers protested, taking to the streets across the country and damaging public and private property, including military installations.

The riots also led to the deaths of at least eight people and injured several others, prompting the authorities to arrest thousands of PTI workers and followers.

During the event today, the Punjab CM regretted that those children, who were misled by the PTI founder's statements, were in jail. "All these events were result of an individual's greed for power," she added.

Referring to the military court sentence for Hassan Niazi, Maryam regretted that the nephew of the PTI founder "mocked the military's uniform and brought shame to the country". "He [Niazi] was jailed for ten years... his future has been destroyed," she added.

Last month, the mili-ary courts sentenced 60 more "culprits", including Hassan Niazi, for their involvement in the May 9 riots, taking the total number of convicts to 85.

The world community, including the United States (US), the United Kingdom (UK) and the European Union (EU) had expressed concerns over the sentencing of civilians by the military courts, maintaining that the convictions were against the international law.

Calling out the ousted premier for facing "karma", Maryam said that she was arrested during the PTI's tenure in front of her father, Nawaz Sharif. "I was in Adiala Jail, when I received news about my mother's death."

Noting that paths for country's development were opening up, she said that she would not be able to launch scholarship programme if her priority was to "turn off someone's air conditioner or heater".

Kashmir struggle

On January 5, 1949, the United Nations adopted a resolution that promised the people of Indian Illegally Occupied Jammu and Kashmir (IOJK) the right to determine their own future through a free and impartial plebiscite. Seventy-six years later, that promise remains unfulfilled, leaving the Kashmiris to endure an unrelenting cycle of violence, occupation, and systemic oppression. As Pakistan observed the Occupied Kashmir's Right to Self-Determination Day on Sunday, the country's leadership, including President Asif Ali Zardari and Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif, reaffirmed their unwavering support for the Kashmiri people's struggle for freedom. The plight of the Kashmiris is a tragic reminder of the international community's failure to enforce its own resolutions. India's unilateral revocation of Jammu and Kashmir's special status on August 5, 2019, compounded decades of injustice. By stripping the region of its autonomy and initiating demographic changes, India has sought to suppress the Kashmiri identity. Despite these measures, the resilience and spirit of the Kashmiri people remain unbroken.

The Kashmir dispute is not merely a bilateral issue between Pakistan and India; it is a question of fundamental human rights and international law. Yet, the global response to the suffering of the Kashmiri people has been disturbingly muted. Except for Pakistan, which continues to raise the issue on international platforms, there has been a marked decline in global support for the Kashmiri cause. The international community's apathy emboldens India to continue its oppressive policies, including widespread human rights abuses, mass detentions, curfews, and the use of pellet guns that have blinded children. Pakistan, while grappling with its own economic challenges and complex regional dynamics, cannot abandon its moral and diplomatic responsibility towards Occupied Kashmir. However, resolving this seven-decade-long conflict requires more than Pakistan's solitary efforts. Global powers and regional stakeholders need to recognise that peace in South Asia hinges on resolving the Kashmir dispute.

India, on the other hand, appears unwavering in its stance. Its actions in Occupied Kashmir are not only a violation of international law but also an affront to human dignity. The comparison of Kashmir with other global struggles is apt. They represent the consequences of colonial legacies and the failure of international systems meant to safeguard human rights. Beyond rhetoric, Islamabad must explore innovative ways to garner international support and spotlight India's transgressions. The Kashmiri people deserve the right to determine their own destiny – a right enshrined in the UN Charter and reaffirmed through resolutions and international law. It is incumbent upon all nations that value freedom and justice to support their cause. The struggle for self-determination is not just Kashmir's fight; it is a universal battle against oppression and a call to uphold the dignity and rights of every individual. As Pakistan's leadership reiterated on January 5, the time has come for the world to act. The Kashmiri people have waited long enough for the justice they were promised. The world must not allow another year to pass with unfulfilled commitments and unheeded cries for freedom. Kashmir's struggle for self-determination must not remain a forgotten promise – it must become a global imperative.

The road to dialogue

Last year ended with a glimmer of hope for Pakistan's political stability as the government and the PTI set aside their differences to initiate a long-overdue dialogue. This December breakthrough was followed by a second round of talks last week. However, the positive momentum has faltered, with reports of a deadlock ahead of the third round. The impasse has been attributed to two issues: the PTI's insistence on meeting their detained party chairman, Imran Khan, and the party's reluctance to present a written charter of demands. On the surface, the PTI's demand for access to Imran Khan appears reasonable. The party's leaders argue that they need to consult him before finalising their demands, a privilege enjoyed by leaders of other parties. The government's refusal to facilitate this meeting undermines the spirit of dialogue and provides the PTI with a valid excuse for delay. However, the stalemate is not without deeper complexities, and questions arise about the PTI's hesitance to formalise its demands.

The PTI has, on multiple occasions, verbalised its key demands – the release of political prisoners and the formation of judicial commissions to investigate incidents on May 9 and November 26. These demands have been echoed publicly, both in speeches and on social media. If these are indeed the only demands, reducing them to writing should not be an issue. Yet, the party's reluctance to commit to a written document has fuelled speculation about their true intentions. Observers suggest that the PTI's real priority is the release of Imran Khan and the quashing of cases against him. The party's refusal to submit a written charter stems from a desire to avoid public acknowledgement of this demand, which could be perceived as seeking the very 'NRO' deals the party has historically condemned. By keeping the primary objective ambiguous, the PTI can maintain its narrative of moral high ground while negotiating behind closed doors. However, this strategy risks eroding the credibility of their public rhetoric.

On the other hand, the government's position is equally precarious. While facilitating a meeting between the PTI's negotiation team and Imran could break the deadlock, the government is wary of appearing to capitulate to the PTI's demands without securing concrete assurances in return. Divisions within the ruling coalition further complicate matters. The PML-N's 'doves' seem committed to the dialogue process, but the party's 'hawks' view these talks with suspicion, fearing they may embolden the PTI without yielding substantial benefits for the government. Both sides need to recognise the high stakes involved. A failure to sustain the dialogue will not only deepen political polarisation but also exacerbate the country's economic and governance crises. For the PTI, presenting a written charter of demands is essential to demonstrate seriousness and transparency in their approach. For the government, allowing the PTI access to Imran Khan could serve as a confidence-building measure. By removing this point of contention, the government can shift the onus onto the PTI to engage constructively. However, the government must also be prepared for the PTI's potential insistence on Khan's release as a non-negotiable demand. In such a scenario, the government can reiterate that legal proceedings, not executive orders, will determine the PTI chief's fate. Ultimately, political dialogue is an exercise in compromise and trust-building.

G-B's tourism potential

People involved in Gilgit-Baltistan's tourism industry would certainly have been buoyed by the news that the region was ranked among CNN Travel's list of 25 places worth going to in 2025, alongside other scenic destinations in all sorts of landscapes. The list is heavily focused on natural beauty – only five of the destinations listed are urban areas, and even a few of these are very close to areas of natural beauty. However, G-B stands out for the mountain views and hiking it offers to most tourists, and advanced climbing opportunities for mountaineering enthusiasts, as home to five of the world's 13 tallest mountains, including K-2, which is the second-highest and is widely considered the most difficult to climb.

G-B was once a very popular area for foreign tourists, especially people taking the overland 'Hippie Trail' from Europe to India, but due to wars, political instability and other security issues along the route, most foreign tourists today are only professional mountaineers. Lack of world-class facilities also cost G-B, as people generally opt for places where the scenery may only be half as good, but the facilities and security are ten times better.

However, a bit of investment and some easily-instituted policy reforms could reopen the region to tourists from all over the world. At the bare minimum, the government needs to ensure that air and road connections with G-B are safe and reliable – road connections have been attacked by terrorists and other criminals in the past, while flights to G-B are regularly cancelled due to inclement weather. But beyond getting there safely, other infrastructure improvements need to be balanced with over-commercialisation concerns, lest the work turns into an environmental disaster that actually scares away tourists. After all, it is the rugged allure of the area and the rich heritage and diverse traditions of local communities that should be the top draws.

Youth and the Army: Building a Lasting Partnership for National Security

BY ABDUL BASIT ALVI

One of the most direct and impactful ways in which Pakistani youth contribute to national security is through service in the armed forces. Each year, thousands of young men and women enlist in the Pakistan Army, Navy, and Air Force, driven by a strong sense of duty and patriotism. The Pakistan Army, in particular, has long depended on the bravery and professionalism of its young soldiers to defend the nation's borders and address both external and internal security threats.

A notable example of youth contribution to Pakistan's defense is their active participation in the wars of 1965 and 1971, as well as in more recent engagements against insurrections and terrorism.

In these conflicts, young soldiers exhibited exceptional courage and resilience in the face of adversity.

In more recent years, young recruits have played a critical role in Pakistan's counterterrorism efforts, particularly in Operation Zarb-e-Azb (2014) and Operation Radd-ul-Fasaad (2017).

These operations, aimed at eliminating terrorist networks and stabilizing the country's borders, saw young soldiers make significant contributions to defeating militancy and ensuring the safety of Pakistan's civilian population.

Institutions like the Pakistan Military Academy (PMA) continue to attract young talent, training them to become skilled leaders and warriors.

These programs instill values of patriotism, discipline, and commitment, ensuring a steady stream of dedicated individuals ready to serve the nation.

Beyond military service, many young Pakistanis are also making vital contributions to national security through law enforcement and intelligence agencies.

In the wake of the 9/11 attacks, Pakistan became a key player in the global fight against terrorism, facing numerous internal security challenges posed by terrorist groups, insurgents, and extremist factions.

Young Pakistanis have not only volunteered to serve in security agencies but have risen to leadership roles in organizations such as the Pakistan Rangers, Frontier Corps, Anti-Terrorism Force (ATF), and the Inter-Services Intelligence (ISI).

A noteworthy example of youth involvement in counterterrorism efforts is the role of the Pakistan Rangers in Karachi and other volatile regions, where young officers have worked tirelessly to combat urban terrorism, protect civilians, and maintain law and order.

During the Karachi Operation, launched in 2013 to address terrorism, extremism, and organized crime, young law enforcement officers played critical roles in reclaiming the city from militant groups and ensuring long-term peace.

Additionally, young officers in the Counter-Terrorism Department (CTD) have been instrumental in intelligence gathering, counterinsurgency operations, and community outreach to counter extremist ideologies, further strengthening Pakistan's security apparatus.

Youth-led organizations in Pakistan, such as the Shaheen Force (volunteer national guard units), have emerged as key contributors to enhancing domestic security by involving young people in local defense efforts, particularly in border regions and areas facing insurgent threats.

In the 21st century, national security extends beyond physical borders.

The digital era has introduced new security challenges, and Pakistani youth have proven essential in protecting the nation's digital infrastructure.

With an increase in cyberattacks from both state and non-state actors targeting everything from government systems to critical industries and institutions, youth have become indispensable in defending Pakistan's cyber space.

One notable example of youth involvement in cybersecurity is the Pakistan Cyber Emergency Response Team (PakCERT), which works diligently to protect the country's digital assets from evolving threats.

Many young cybersecurity experts, often with backgrounds in computer science and engineering, have taken on leadership roles in protecting Pakistan's critical infrastructure from cyber threats.

These young professionals are collaborating with government agencies, private sector companies, and educational institutions to strengthen the nation's cyber resilience.

Additionally, youth-led initiatives, such as Cyber Security Awareness Programs in universities and high schools, are educating young people about the risks of cyber threats and how to defend against them.

Ethical hackers and cybersecurity enthusiasts are becoming vital contributors by identifying vulnerabilities in systems and helping protect Pakistan from cyber espionage, hacking, and data breaches.

The involvement of youth in cybersecurity also extends to global competitions like Capture the Flag (CTF), where Pakistan's young tech experts have earned recognition for their skills in ethical hacking and digital defense.

These efforts are crucial as Pakistan modernizes its military and national security infrastructure, increasingly relying on technological solutions to address new and emerging threats.

Beyond traditional roles in the military and intelligence sectors, many young Pakistanis are contributing to national security by advocating for peace, social stability, and conflict resolution.

Organizations such as Peace Foundation Pakistan and the Youth Parliament of Pakistan have played a central role in fostering dialogue and promoting national unity, particularly in regions impacted by terrorism, sectarian violence, and ethnic divisions.

Youth-led programs focused on countering violent extremism have proven essential in communities vulnerable to radicalization. Young activists and social workers, often collaborating with law enforcement and community leaders, have facilitated interfaith and interethnic dialogue to resolve local conflicts and promote peace. A notable example is the Youth Against Terrorism (YAT) movement, which brings together young Pakistani students, activists, and professionals to raise awareness about the dangers of extremism and the importance of social harmony.

Through awareness campaigns, workshops, and public discussions, this initiative empowers youth to become agents of change in their communities, diminishing the appeal of militant ideologies.

Pakistani youth also contribute significantly to national security through volunteerism, particularly in disaster response, humanitarian aid, and community resilience efforts. Whether responding to natural disasters such as floods and earth-quakes, or engaging in local security initiatives, young volunteers are often on the frontlines of national stability. For instance, during the 2010 floods, young volunteers played a crucial role in providing immediate relief, distributing food, offering medical assistance, and helping affected communities rebuild. During the COVID-19 pandemic, young volunteers were vital in spreading information, supporting frontline workers, and ensuring the safety and well-being of vulnerable populations. This spirit of volunteerism is also evident in youth-led organizations like The Citizens Foundation (TCF) and Indus Hospital, where young people are making significant contributions to enhancing public health, education, and social infrastructure – key pillars of national stability and security.

Pakistani youth and the Pakistan Army stand united, working in harmony for the nation's security. The bond between these two vital components of national defense is strong and unbreakable. Any malicious attempts by our enemies to sow divisions between our youth and armed forces will ultimately fail, as the entire nation continues to support and collaborate with our courageous military to safeguard the security of Pakistan.

Transforming Pakistan

BY AHSAN IQBAL

In an era of rapid globalisation and technological transformation, nations are redefining their strategies to secure a competitive edge in the global economy. Pakistan stands at a pivotal crossroads, ready to embrace a transformative vision for economic growth and internal security challenges posed by terrorist groups, insurgents, and extremist factions.

Young Pakistanis have not only volunteered to serve in security agencies but have risen to leadership roles in organizations such as the Pakistan Rangers, Frontier Corps, Anti-Terrorism Force (ATF), and the Inter-Services Intelligence (ISI).

A noteworthy example of fostering startups, and producing 200,000 IT graduates annually aligns with the country's evolving digital ecosystem.

Environment: Reducing greenhouse gas emissions by 50 per cent and promoting reforestation reflect the nation's urgent need for climate resilience.

These are not wishful aspirations; they are practical, measurable objectives designed to build a stable and dynamic economy.

Balancing immediate needs with long-term vision: For decades, Pakistan has been trapped in a cycle of short-term fixes – IMF bailouts, import restrictions, and ad hoc policies. While such measures address immediate crises, they fail to resolve underlying structural issues.

Uraan Pakistan breaks this cycle by balancing short-term gains with a sustained long-term vision.

Key priorities include:

Quick Wins: Boosting IT exports, promoting SMEs, and empowering youth through entrepreneurship;

Foundational Reforms: Stabilising the rupee, enhancing tax collection, and improving productivity to address systemic challenges; and Strategic Partnerships: Collaborating with the private sector, development organisations, and academia to foster innovation and trust.

This dual approach ensures that while pressing challenges are addressed, the nation remains firmly on a path toward enduring prosperity.

Driving momentum – exports and digital innovation: Exports are positioned as the engine of economic growth. By prioritising industries with high export potential – IT, agriculture, creative industries, minerals, and manpower – the initiative aims to stabilise the rupee, reduce import dependence, and unlock Pakistan's economic potential. Achieving $60 billion in exports annually is not merely aspirational; it is an achievable target given focused reforms.

Similarly, the e-Pakistan component envisions a digital revolution. By nurturing a robust startup ecosystem, producing 200,000 IT graduates annually, and aiming for Pakistan's first tech unicorn, the initiative seeks to establish Pakistan as a global technology hub, creating jobs and empowering its youth.

Sustainability and infrastructure – building for the future: Climate change is an existential threat, and Uraan Pakistan responds with bold environmental goals.

Reducing greenhouse gas emissions by 50 per cent, expanding water storage by 10 million acre-feet, and increasing cultivable land by 20.3 million acres are transformative measures to ensure food and water security for generations.

Simultaneously, modern energy and transport infrastructure are critical for growth. Increasing renewable energy's share to 10 per cent, enhancing railway transport to 15 per cent of passenger travel, and fostering regional connectivity are strategic steps toward economic integration and efficiency. Equity and empowerment: a just society: Economic growth must go hand in hand with social development. Uraan Pakistan prioritises human development by: raising universal health coverage by 12 per cent; increasing literacy rates by 10 per cent; and enhancing women's labour force participation by 17 per cent.

These measures reflect a commitment to fostering a cohesive and inclusive society, ensuring that prosperity benefits every citizen.

At this critical juncture, Pakistan's future depends on unity. Differences – whether political, regional, or ideological – must be set aside for the greater goal of national prosperity. Our collective strength lies in collaboration, mutual respect, and shared determination.

As Allama Iqbal so eloquently reminds us: "Tu Shaheen hai, parwaz hai kaam tera, Tere samne asman aur bhi hain."

The challenges may be daunting, but together, we can soar towards new horizons. We can transform Pakistan into a beacon of resilience and prosperity by embracing unity, innovation, and hard work.

Let us seize this moment and build a future that fulfills our aspirations and inspires the world.

SECP seeks feedback on improvements in takeover regulations

BUSINESS

REPORTER

ISLAMABAD

The Securities and Exchange Commission of Pakistan (SECP) has issued a consultation paper to seek feedback on areas of improvement in the Listed Companies (Substantia l Acquisition of Voting Shares and Takeovers) Regulations, 2017.

Through these modifications SECP aims to strengthen the regulatory framework governing takeover transactions of listed companies by enhancing transparency and introducing measures for safeguarding rights of minority shareholders.

The key areas of improvement include proposals for streamlining public announcement timelines, revising price determination criteria for frequently and not frequently traded shares, and enhancing disclosure requirements for acquirers and listed companies.

Provisions for voluntary offers, obligations of Manager to the Offer (MTO) and mechanisms for handling indirect or chain acquisitions have also been floated for further deliberations.

The proposals have been developed following an initial round of consultations with various stakeholders including market experts, MTOs, law firms, chartered accountants and listed companies. The scope of consultations is now being expanded to ensure wider participation in finalizing proposed amendment areas so any amendments can effectively address the evolving needs of the market and its stakeholders.

The consultation paper including rationale for each suggested area of improvement is uploaded on the SECP website.

New govt initiative aims to boost SEZs

- 35 SEZ survey completed to aid data-driven decisions

BUSINESS

REPORTER

ISLAMABAD

The government has introduced an 18-point action plan to enhance operations and attract investment in Special Economic Zones (SEZs), as revealed during a meeting of the Board of Investment's (BoI) Approval Committee in the federal capital on Tuesday.

The comprehensive plan aims to resolve longstanding issues in SEZs and upgrade infrastructure to meet international standards.

The meeting, chaired by Federal Minister for Investment and Privatisation Abdul Aleem Khan, included provincial representatives, including those from Gilgit-Baltistan.

Key decisions included the approval of a new Land Lease Policy and amendments to the SEZ Act, reducing the notice period for meetings from 21 days to seven. These measures are expected to accelerate decision-making processes and spur economic growth.

A comprehensive survey of the 35 SEZs has been finalised, enabling data-driven decisions for their management and development.

The investment and privatization minister emphasised that the survey report, now digitised, is a shared resource that provincial governments and relevant departments must utilise to resolve challenges efficiently.

The BoI secretary and provinces' representatives provided updates and shared insights on the current status of the zones. Key aspects of the plan include fostering inter-provincial collaboration, streamlining bureaucratic processes, and enhancing infrastructure development to unlock the full potential of SEZs.

Aleem Khan, said that the completion of the survey of 35 industrial Zones across the country, identification and resolution of their problems is a great progress and an important achievement that would have a positive impact on the country's economy.

He added that the upgradation of SEZs has been done in the shortest possible time and important steps have been taken to ensure better quality in this regard.

"This digital data is a mutual asset that all stakeholders must leverage. Regular and timely meetings of the Approval Committee are crucial for addressing issues swiftly. The next session has already been scheduled for February," he added.

The minister highlighted the government's focus on simplifying processes to attract investments. "We are removing unnecessary complications to create an investor-friendly environment. Encouraging diverse industries in these zones will help boost foreign exchange inflows and drive rapid economic development," he said.

With these initiatives, the government aims to make SEZs the backbone of Pakistan's industrial growth and economic stability.

Investment-friendly policies and digital innovation are expected to play a pivotal role in transforming SEZs into hubs of economic activity.

Meanwhile, Minister for Board of Investment, Privatization & Communications Abdul Aleem Khan Wednesday said that Business Facilitation Center will be completed and made functional during current month, which will have an effective monitoring system and facilties will be provided to the investors under one roof.

The minister visited the center and said that the construction of such a magnificent and quality Business Facilitation Center in four months is commendable, where relevant officers will provide services at various counters for the convenience of investors.

We have to provide maximum facilities to our investors in the shortest possible time and making it possible to provide facilities to investors faster on the model of modern and developed countries, he added.

After visiting the center, Aleem Khan also chaired a high-level meeting and directed that work should also be started for the online provision of various facilities in this center and to ensure that the business community visiting here does not have to go around the departments later to resolve their problems.

The minister was briefed that this project cost Rs490 million on 12,000 square feet and is nearing completion in collaboration with the Capital Development Authority and the Board of Investment.

During the session, the Awami National Party (ANP) senator claimed that plastic rice and meat from donkeys, dogs and frogs were being sold in Pakistan, lamenting the absence of effective food quality checks.

The senator also cited a report claiming that only 22% of the milk sold in the country was genuine, while the remaining 78% was chemically produced and fake. The Senate body formed a sub-committee tasked with drafting a comprehensive food safety policy.

Raising concerns over the poor state of regulations, Senator Aimal Wali Khan on Wednesday made some startling allegations during a high-level meeting on food security, leaving participants shocked.

These disturbing revelations came to the fore during a meeting of the Senate Standing Committee on National Food Security, chaired by Senator Syed Masroor Hassan, to address challenges in the country's basmati rice exports to the European Union (EU).

During the session, the Awami National Party (ANP) senator claimed that plastic rice and meat from donkeys, dogs and frogs were being sold in Pakistan, lamenting the absence of effective food quality checks.

The senator also cited a report claiming that only 22% of the milk sold in the country was genuine, while the remaining 78% was chemically produced and fake. The Senate body formed a sub-committee tasked with drafting a comprehensive food safety policy.

Officials from the Ministry of National Food Security & Research (MNFS&R) revealed that 107 consignments of rice sent to the EU had faced objections, with 10,300 shipments exported until 2024.

The Federal Investigation Agency (FIA) has registered 17 FIRs against officials and employees over alleged mismanagement in rice exports. Of these, 11 suspects are in custody, two are absconding, and four are on bail, according to MNFS&R officials.

Senator Aimal criticised food security officials for failing to prevent consignment rejections. "Why does fungus develop on shipments cleared for export?" questioned Aimal, slamming the inefficiencies in the export process.

Another committee member, Senator Dinesh Kumar, raised alarms over the absence of a comprehensive food safety policy, a concern echoed by the Secretary of National Food Security.

The committee also deliberated on the recovery of cotton cess, with Federal Minister Rana Tanveer Hussain reporting that Rs3.2 billion in cess remained unpaid since 2016.

The All Pakistan Textile Mills Association (APTMA) claims they lack funds to pay the cess," said the minister, adding that a policy for recovery would be proposed after consultations with the prime minister. Officials noted that "pressure from the committee has resulted in monthly cess collections of Rs30 million." However, they called for non-payment of cotton cess to be classified as a non-bailable offence.

The committee has summoned APTMA representatives for the next meeting to resolve the issue.

India Extends Sheikh Hasina's Visa Amid Bangladesh's Extradition Request

WEB DESK

MUMBAI

India has extended the visa of Bangladesh's former Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina, who fled the country last year amidst political turmoil. Hasina, who left Dhaka on August 5, 2024, after violent student-led protests resulted in over 500 deaths, has been residing in New Delhi under tight security. Despite speculations surrounding her potential asylum, Indian authorities have firmly denied such claims, stating that the visa extension is merely a technical measure to facilitate her stay.

The visa extension coincides with a formal extradition request from Bangladesh's interim government, led by Nobel laureate Muhammad Yunus, submitted on December 23. The Bangladeshi government accuses Hasina of being involved in the violence and enforced disappearances during the protests of 2024.

In a further escalation, Bangladesh's immigration authorities revoked the passports of 97 individuals, including Hasina, on Tuesday. According to Yunus' spokesperson, Abul Kalam Azad Majumder, Hasina and others are implicated in the forced disappearances and killings during the protests. While 22 individuals had their passports revoked for their role in the disappearances, the remaining 75, including Hasina, were accused of involvement in the killings of July 2024.

However, many critics argue that these charges against Hasina are politically motivated, viewing them as part of the interim government's efforts to consolidate power ahead of Bangladesh's general elections.

India now faces a diplomatic challenge, with the extension of Hasina's visa potentially complicating its relations with Bangladesh. While granting the extension is unlikely to have an immediate impact on bilateral ties, the extradition request has added a layer of complexity. Analysts note that India's decision to extend the visa, rather than address the extradition demands, reflects the political sensitivity of the situation.

Trump asks the Supreme Court to block sentencing in his hush money case in New York

WEB DESK

WASHINGTON

President-elect Donald Trump is asking the Supreme Court to call off Friday's sentencing in his hush money case in New York.

Trump's lawyers turned to the nation's highest court Wednesday after New York courts refused to postpone the sentencing by Juan M. Merchan, the judge who presided over Trump's trial and conviction last May on 34 felony counts of falsifying business records.

Trump's attorneys asked for an immediate stay of Friday's sentencing "to prevent grave injustice and harm to the institution of the Presidency and the operations of the federal government."

The Supreme Court asked for a response from New York prosecutors by Thursday.

Merchan has indicated he will not impose jail time, fines or probation.

Trump's attorneys have pointed to the Supreme Court's ruling giving him broad immunity from criminal prosecution as they tried to have his New York conviction tossed out.

While that opinion came in a different case, Trump's lawyers say it means some of the evidence used against him in his hush money trial should have been shielded by presidential immunity. Merchan has disagreed.

Indian railways spends over 22 billion-dollar on modernisation

WEB DESK

NEW DELHI

State-run Indian Railways has spent more than $22 billion so far in the current fiscal year, focusing on projects to expand capacity and deliver faster and safer travel to passengers, the government said on Wednesday.

The government is pushing to open new lines and expand electrification as part of efforts to achieve net zero carbon emissions on the railways by 2030.

By Jan. 5, the railways had spent 1.92 trillion rupees ($22.37 billion) of its 2.65 trillion rupees overall budget for the fiscal year, which runs from April to March. This included 344.12 billion rupees ($4 billion) spent on safety-related works and 403.67 billion rupees ($4.7 billion) on rolling stock, the government said in a statement.

Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman, who will present her annual budget for 2025/26 early next month, is expected to announce an increase in allocation for railways from the 2.52 trillion rupees allocated for the current fiscal year.

The railway, which operates a network of over 68,000 km (42,000 miles), is projected to earn 2.8 trillion rupees in 2024/25 from passenger and freight traffic, an 8% increase from the previous fiscal year. It is targeting 2.76 trillion rupees in operational spending.

"The fruits of consistent capital expenditure over the past decade are evident in the form of 136 Vande Bharat trains, 97% electrification of broad-gauge lines, and major upgrades to infrastructure, including new lines, gauge conversion, and track doubling," the statement said.

The Vande Bharat sleeper trains, currently undergoing speed and safety certification, are expected to come into service this year, improving long-distance rail travel.

Indian Railways transports an average of 23 million passengers daily, aiming to build a "future-ready" system for India's 1.4 billion population, the railway ministry said.

Critics say the railways face many challenges, including competition from an expanding road network and growing air traffic coupled with issues like slow train speeds and overcrowding.

China Sees Surge in HMPV Cases: Symptoms and Safety Precautions

STAFF REPORTER

ISLAMABAD

Hospitals across China are currently overwhelmed as a surge in Human Metapneumovirus (HMPV) infections sweeps through the country, particularly affecting vulnerable groups like children and the elderly.

As winter peaks, the virus, which causes flu-like symptoms, has led to overcrowded medical facilities and sparked concerns of a new health crisis.

While viral videos showing packed hospitals have fueled alarm on social media, Chinese health officials have downplayed the situation, attributing it to a seasonal winter trend. The World Health Organization (WHO) has not declared a global health emergency, but rising cases have prompted local authorities to strengthen monitoring efforts.

What is HMPV?

Human Metapneumovirus (HMPV) is a respiratory virus first identified in 2001.

It spreads through respiratory droplets from coughing and sneezing or by touching contaminated surfaces. Although it typically causes mild symptoms resembling the common cold, it can lead to more severe respiratory issues, particularly in infants, the elderly, and individuals with weakened immune systems. Symptoms of HMPV

The virus shares symptoms with other respiratory infections, including:

- Cough
- Runny or blocked nose
- Sore throat
- Fever

In severe cases, HMPV can lead to:

- Wheezing
- Breathing difficulties
- Pneumonia
- Severe asthma, particularly in adults

Young children under the age of five, elderly individuals, and those with compromised immune systems are at the highest risk of severe illness.

Treatment and Precautions

Currently, there is no vaccine or antiviral treatment available for HMPV. Treatment is mostly supportive, focusing on symptom management such as:

- Staying hydrated
- Resting
- Taking fever-reducing medications as advised by a doctor

Health experts recommend several preventive measures, especially for those at higher risk, including:

- Washing hands regularly
- Avoiding touching the face
- Wearing masks in crowded areas
- Staying home if feeling unwell

Hundreds rally for South Korea's Yoon as new arrest bid beckons

WEB DESK

SOUTH KOREA

Hundreds of supporters of South Korea's impeached President Yoon Suk Yeol rallied outside his residence Wednesday as investigators prepared a fresh attempt to arrest him.

Yoon has refused questioning and resisted arrest since his bungled December 3 martial law decree plunged South Korea into its worst political crisis in decades.

Investigators secured a new arrest warrant Tuesday after an initial seven-day order expired. Several hundred members of his base rushed to the presidential residence in central Seoul in response, braving sub-zero temperatures.

"A large number of people are coming out to join us. Despite the cold weather, many stayed up all night last night, braving the chill," Lee Hye-sook, a 57-year-old Yoon supporter, told AFP outside the residence.

"Witnessing their resilience against the wind and cold, I am confident that President Yoon Suk Yeol will return, and we will prevail."

Some supporters left flowers outside and ribbons with the Trump-style slogan "Make Korea Great Again", while others waved American flags at the gates of the compound from where the suspended leader has resisted arrest.

Despite a cold weather warning set for 9 pm (1200 GMT), the suspended president's supporters were defiant, shouting "impeachment is invalid!"

Rival protesters calling for Yoon to be punished waved glowsticks -- commonly seen at K-pop concerts -- and held placards that read, "Detain, arrest insurrectionist Yoon Suk Yeol!"

Yoon's legal team said on Wednesday he remains inside the residential compound, after investigators cast doubt a day earlier on his whereabouts.

"Last night, I personally visited the official residence, met the president there, and left," said his lawyer Yoon Kap-keun, who is unrelated.

The Corruption Investigation Office (CIO), which is leading the probe into the president, has kept secret the duration of the new warrant.

Yoon would become

Wednesday.

CIO chief Oh Dong-woon said on Tuesday the force would "prepare thoroughly" to make sure their second arrest attempt was successful.

Acting president Choi Sang-mok warned against violence in the event of another stand-off.

"Under no circumstances should there be any injuries to citizens or conflicts among government agencies. Please ensure every precaution is taken," Choi said in a meeting with officials.

Barbed wire, barricades -

An AFP journalist saw Yoon's guards walking behind rows of buses and locked entrance gates covered in barbed wire at the residential compound on

His legal team said he planned to attend the trial at some stage and lawyer Yoon Kap-keun told reporters on Wednesday "the President's position remains unchanged".

"Of course, issues related to security and safety must be resolved in advance," he said.

National Assembly Speaker Woo Won-shik wrote on X it was distressing to watch Yoon mobilise force to stop his arrest because the "whole world" was watching.

Investigators are trying to work out how to tackle an expected wall of security after being stopped by hundreds of Presidential Security Service (PSS) guards last week.

"The number of PSS personnel cannot be disclosed as it is confidential information," a service spokesperson told AFP.

On Wednesday the country's parliament voted down two bills to investigate Yoon and his wife for different charges, failing to get the two-thirds majority they needed.

The impeached Yoon is being investigated on charges of "insurrection" and, if formally arrested and convicted, faces prison or, at worst, the death penalty.

The Constitutional Court has up to 180 days from December 14, when it received the case, to determine whether to dismiss Yoon or restore his presidential powers.

Biden administration set to announce 'substantial' final weapons package for Ukraine

WEB DESK

WASHINGTON

The Biden administration is set to announce a massive, final weapons aid package for Ukraine as part of Defense Secretary Lloyd Austin's visit to Germany on Thursday to meet with representatives of about 50 partner nations who have come to Ukraine's defense since Russia invaded nearly three years ago, two senior defense officials said.

Investigators secured be "substantial," although it would not include all of the roughly $4 billion left in the congressionally authorized funding for Ukraine. There likely would be "more than a couple of billion dollars" remaining for the incoming Trump defense team to provide to Ukraine if it chose to do so, the officials said Tuesday in briefing reporters traveling with Austin.

Ukraine is in the midst of launching a second offensive in Russia's Kursk region and is facing a barrage of long-range missiles and ongoing advances from Russia as both sides seek to put themselves in the strongest negotiating position possible before President-elect Donald Trump takes office on Jan. 20.

Biden defense officials working on Ukraine have been in contact with Trump's transition team to discuss "all the

The U.S. has provided

$66 billion of that total.

The package to be announced on Thursday will be drawn from existing stockpiles with a goal of getting most of the weapons pledged to Ukraine by the time Trump is sworn in, one of the defense officials said.

Philippines authorities detain 400 foreign nationals in scam center raid

WEB DESK

MANILA

Around 400 foreign nationals were arrested on Wednesday in a "large-scale" raid on a suspected online scam farm in Manila, the national immigration agency said.

Authorities raided a building and found workers allegedly engaged in online scam operations targeting victims abroad.

International concern has grown in recent years over similar scam operations in Asia which are often staffed by trafficking victims who were tricked or coerced into promoting bogus cryptocurrency investments and other cons.

Their operations were found to violate immigration laws and posed significant risks to the public," Fortunato Manahan, the Bureau of Immigration intelligence division chief, said in a statement describing the latest raid.

President Ferdinand

Marcos in July announced a ban by the end of 2024 on Philippine online gambling operators (POGO) that Manila says have been used as cover by organized crime groups for human trafficking, money laundering, kidnapping and even murder.

The Bureau of Immigration had been monitoring the "POGO-like activities" of the raided company "for some time", the statement said.

The foreign nationals, many of whom were Chinese, were undergoing booking procedures, immigration bureau spokeswoman Dana Sandoval told AFP.

They will be temporarily detained while awaiting deportation, the bureau said.

The Washington-based think-tank United States Institute of Peace said in a May 2024 report that online scammers target millions of victims around the world and rake in annual revenues of $64 billion.

It estimates the industry employs half a million workers, including 15,000 in the Philippines, who were recruited mainly via social media and were then forced to carry out scams, facing torture if they failed to meet quotas.

data and highlights the urgent need for effective tobacco control strategies. It addresses the gap by including out-of-school adolescents, a group often overlooked despite being vulnerable to tobacco marketing. Dr. Kamran Siddiqi (Principal Investigator of the TAP Study) emphasized the importance of this inclusive approach, saying, "Our survey aims to provide information about current trends of tobacco and nicotine use among adolescents in Pakistan, also including out-of-school adolescent group, a population often overlooked. The results reflect that adolescents prefer nicotine pouches and e-cigarettes more as compared to cigarettes and smokeless tobacco."

Dr. Amina Khan from The Initiative, mentioned that "We have observed an increase in the presence of valid tax stamps on cigarettes from 2023 to 2024. This shows that there is an improvement in the efforts to regulate cigarette packs in Pakistan."

Resilient internet key to realizing Pakistan's vision for boosting IT exports: Experts

ISLAMABAD

The experts on Wednesday at the public-private dialogue on information technology and telecommunication underscored that the country's vision to boost its IT exports to significant level would be unachievable without resilient internet, as alternative connectivity options based on modern technology and terrestrial routes are the way forward.

The Sustainable Development Policy Institute (SDPI)'s 69th Study Group on Information technology (IT) and Telecommunication hosted the Public-Private Dialogue on Preserving the lifeline of our Modern World: Strengthening the Internet Resilience in Pakistan, said a press release.

Chaired by Brigadier (R) Mohammad Yasin, Senior Advisor Emeritus at SDPI, the public-private dialogue brought together experts to address mounting issues plaguing the nation's internet connectivity and its implications for economic and social life.

In his welcome remarks, Brigadier (R) Yasin opened the discussion by stressing that the indefinite performance issues of Pakistan's internet infrastructure are unacceptable.

"Sluggish speeds and frequent disruptions are taking a toll on businesses, education, healthcare, and government," he said.

Pakistan ranked a dismal 100th out of 111 nations for mobile internet speed and 141st out of 158 for broadband in a recent OKLA Internet Speed Test report.

Dr. Abid Qaiyum Suleri, Executive Director of SDPI called for a comprehensive strategy to regulate internet technology without disrupting connectivity. "We must learn from countries like China, UAE, and Saudi Arabia, which balance security risks with seamless internet access," he said.

Jahanzeb Rahim, Member (Telecom), Ministry of Information Technology and Telecommunication while chairing the panel highlighted the critical dependence of Pakistan's telecom sector on submarine cables and emphasized the need for diversification of terrestrial links to ensure robust connectivity.

Rahim proposed the adoption of orbital satellites as a complementary measure to enhance connectivity. He stressed the importance of collaboration between industry, policymakers, and academia to achieve sustainable growth. "The Sustainable Development Policy Institute (SDPI) can play a pivotal role by leading a charter of business practices that remain independent of political changes," he suggested.

Citing the International Telecommunication Union (ITU), Rahim noted a 14% increase in ITU services and coverage, calling it a "slight improvement in ICT infrastructure."

The Telecom Operators Association shared significant progress in fiber optic deployment, reporting the installation of 23,000 km of fiber optic cables and connecting four million households last year. Despite this achievement, Rahim pointed out that Pakistan's 120,000 km optical fiber cable manufacturing capacity remains underutilized. "We need to scale up this capacity to meet future demands," he urged.

Pakistan has also acquired a web trust audit for its key public sector infrastructure, becoming one of the few among 137 countries to do so. Rahim underscored this achievement as a step towards ensuring quality and secure services for end-users.

"Our vision is to provide quality service to end-users, and with a market size of 20-22 million households, we aim to connect 10 million households next year," he added.

Rahim highlighted Pakistan's strategic geographic position, describing it as "the cusp of the highest population center" and likened its potential to becoming "the next Suez Canal or digital corridor of the world." He also emphasized the need to boost the telecom sector's contribution to the national GDP, which currently stands at a mere 1%.

Dr. Muhammad Mukarram Khan, Director General of Cyber Vigilance at the Pakistan Telecommunication Authority (PTA), pointed out that cyber-attacks and sabotage are exacerbating the challenges in Pakistan.

"Internet disruptions should be a last resort, as they compromise the trust of citizens and businesses," he warned, urging the government to remain focussed on readiness and modernized infrastructure.
