LG elections to be held in Sindh next year, CM Murad announces

- CM Sindh rejects referendum as solution to provinces issue

STAFF REPORTER

KARACHI

Sindh Chief Minister Syed Murad Ali Shah has reiterated that local government elections in the province will be held on time, announcing plans to introduce a new law aimed at strengthening the local government system and transferring more powers to elected representatives at the grassroots level.

Addressing a press conference in Karachi on Thursday, the chief minister said the provincial government was working to introduce the new local government law within three months. He said the next local government elections would be held under the revised law, which would make the system more effective and improve governance at the grassroots level.

Murad Ali Shah said empowering local government representatives was essential to providing relief to people, as the transfer of authority to the lower levels of government would help address public issues more effectively. He made it clear that the provincial government would not delay the elections and would hold them according to the schedule.

To improve the existing system, the chief minister announced the formation of a two-member committee comprising Syed Nasir Hussain Shah and Zia-ul-Hassan Lanjar. The committee will consult politicians, business representatives, journalists and other stakeholders to gather recommendations for reforms.

He said the committee would begin consultations next week and submit its recommendations to the provincial cabinet within three months. The proposals would then be incorporated into legislation for the next local government elections.

The chief minister maintained that Sindh already had a functioning local government system and said other provinces should also hold local government elections and give greater powers to their elected representatives. He criticised provinces that, according to him, did not have an effective local government system, saying they should focus on strengthening their own institutions rather than criticising Sindh.

Responding to questions about the creation of new provinces, Murad Ali Shah said the Sindh Assembly had already made a decision on the issue. He questioned the need for a referendum, arguing that the 2024 general elections had cost between Rs40 billion and Rs50 billion. He said people had already expressed their decisions through their elected representatives. However, he added that the provincial government could bring another resolution on the matter in the Sindh Assembly next week.

Speaking about the recent collapse of an under-construction building in Karachi's Adamjee Society, the chief minister said three people had lost their lives and 14 others were injured. He announced that the government was planning major changes within the Sindh Building Control Authority (SBCA), with 16 officials identified following the incident. Their suspension had been recommended, and they would be issued charge sheets.

Murad Ali Shah said illegal constructions were also linked to weaknesses in the local government system and warned that those found responsible for negligence would face strict action. He added that construction work on buildings operating under stay orders had been stopped, although 123 buildings were still being constructed under court stay orders.

Security forces have killed 12 terrorists in a series of intelligence-based operations across Balochistan. The Inter-Services Public Relations (ISPR) issued the statement from Rawalpindi on Thursday.

The ISPR said the operations took place in the districts of Noshki, Sibi, Panjgur and Kech. It described the dead as members of Fitna al-Hindustan, a group it calls Indian-sponsored. The operations have been going on since November 20 as part of the wider anti-terrorism campaign.

On November 20, forces targeted a terrorist hideout in Noshki. After a heavy exchange of fire, eight terrorists were killed. Weapons and ammunition were recovered from their bodies.

On November 21, forces stopped the movement of terrorists in Sibi, and the ISPR said the militants were killed in the operation.

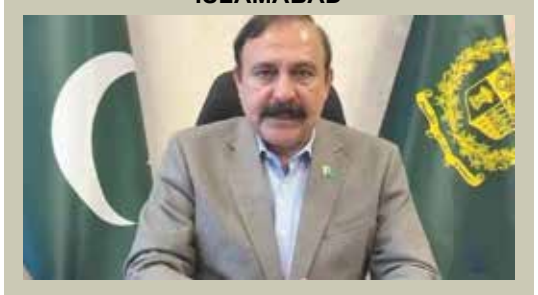

On November 22 and 23, forces destroyed terrorist hideouts in two separate operations in Panjgur and Kech. Two more terrorists were killed in these actions.

The ISPR said the campaign by security forces and law-enforcement agencies will continue at full speed under the National Action Plan approved by the Federal Apex Committee. It added that the operations will go on until foreign-sponsored and foreign-supported terrorism is completely removed from the country.

PML-N govt hints at constituting Electoral Reforms Committee without PTI's participation

STAFF REPORTER

ISLAMABAD

A deadlock persists between the government and Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) over the formation of the Electoral Reforms Committee, with the government hinting at constituting the committee without PTI's participation.

A third meeting took place between Government Chief Whip Tariq Fazal Chaudhry and Opposition Chief Whip Amir Dogar, during which the formation of the Electoral Reforms Committee was discussed, though no consensus could be reached on committee matters.

Amir Dogar stated that PTI has not yet decided whether to join the Electoral Reforms Committee, adding that he is not in a position to submit names for the parliamentary committee on his own without the approval of the party leadership.

Tariq Fazal Chaudhry stated that the government has already rejected PTI's demand for equal representation on the committee, urging PTI to clarify whether it intends to join the body or not. He added that the Electoral Reforms Committee can be formed even without PTI's participation.

The federal minister remarked that PTI's non-serious attitude is delaying the formation of the Electoral Reforms Committee, stating that it appears PTI is not serious about the holding of upcoming elections.

Fazl Announces Protests Over Sargodha Ban

STAFF REPORTER

LAHORE

Jamiat Ulema-e-Islam-Fazl (JUI-F) chief Maulana Fazlur Rehman on Thursday announced nationwide protests against restrictions on the party's planned conference in Sargodha, alleging arrests of party workers and house arrest of senior leaders.

In a video statement posted on X, Fazl called on party workers across the country to stage demonstrations and block major highways, from Kohistan and Chitral to Badin, Turbat, Makran and Chaman.

The confrontation escalated earlier this week after Punjab police deployed a heavy contingent outside his Lahore residence and prevented him from leaving ahead of a scheduled address to lawyers at the invitation of the Lahore High Court Bar Association.

The JUI-F subsequently approached the Lahore High Court, challenging the alleged confinement of its chief and the cordoning off of his residence.

Meanwhile, The Sargodha district administration imposed a 30-day ban on the entry of Jamiat Ulema-e-Islam-Fazl (JUI-F) chief Maulana Fazlur Rehman and eight others, citing concerns over public safety and the maintenance of law and order.

Bilawal Bhutto Zardari: South Punjab Should Be A Province, But Not Punjab's Four-Way Split

- PPP chairman calls for fair accountability, PTI's role in electoral reforms, and a stronger Parliament during Multan press conference

ADNAN QURESHI

MULTAN

Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP) Chairman Bilawal Bhutto Zardari has said that South Punjab should be made a separate province, but he has never advocated dividing Punjab into four parts. He said the country's system is in a state of collapse, and it is important to identify the reasons behind this situation.

Addressing a press conference at the Multan Press Club, Bilawal Bhutto Zardari said that despite the government's repeated claims and efforts to eliminate corruption, allegations of corruption continue to increase. He stressed that Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) should also be included in the electoral reforms process, adding that decisions made outside Parliament would create further problems. He said Parliament must be strengthened, but a lack of trust among political parties remains a major challenge.

He said this was the first election in the country's history that had faced criticism from almost all political parties. Even members of the ruling coalition had alleged that the elections were rigged.

Bilawal said the creation of South Punjab province was the fundamental right of its people. He pointed out that the proposed name of the province had also included Bahawalpur, reflecting the region's demands and identity.

He further said that Pakistan was currently facing serious economic and political challenges. The people were struggling with inflation, unemployment and economic pressure, while there were no immediate signs of improvement in the prevailing situation.

Referring to constitutional amendments, Bilawal said efforts had been made to take all stakeholders into confidence during the passage of the 26th Constitutional Amendment. He said the 27th Constitutional Amendment had been passed with a two-thirds majority; however, broader political consensus was essential in constitutional and parliamentary matters. Clarifying his earlier use of the term "brute majority," he said he was referring to a two-thirds majority.

Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif informed a JI delegation during a meeting that the government had announced substantial subsidies to ease the financial burden on the public.

The prime minister said petroleum prices had increased following the outbreak of war between Iran and the United States, adding that regional tensions had contributed to higher fuel costs.

He said around 20 million people had benefited from the government's relief measures, including subsidies on petrol for vehicles with engine capacities of up to 800cc.

PM Shehbaz said a team led by Deputy Prime Minister Ishaq Dar, which also includes the finance and petroleum ministers, had been working on proposals to provide further relief.

He said the government had remained in contact with JI to discuss additional measures for consumers.

The prime minister said a committee had been constituted to examine the party's proposals and oversee their implementation.

IHC reserves verdict on intra-court appeal against CDA action at Bari Imam House

STAFF REPORTER

ISLAMABAD

The Islamabad High Court (IHC) on Thursday reserved its verdict on the maintainability of an intra-court appeal challenging a single bench decision in a case concerning the Capital Development Authority's (CDA) action against Bari Imam House.

A division bench comprising Justice Azam Khan and Justice Muhammad Asif heard the appeal filed by Muhammad Akmal, represented by counsel Ahsan Bhoon.

During the hearing, the court directed the counsel to read out the concluding paragraph of the single bench judgment.

Ahsan Bhoon argued that the site had not yet been demarcated and requested that a joint demarcation be conducted before any further action was taken.

He said the revenue record showed that the shrine of Golra Sharif had been granted exemption, along with other land. He added that thousands of visitors came to the shrine of Hazrat Bari Imam, but the langar facility had been discontinued.

The counsel maintained that no road existed at the site in the revenue record and that a committee had been constituted to examine the matter.

He clarified that the shrine was not his personal property and that he was its hereditary custodian. He said visitors stayed there and no commercial activity had ever taken place at the premises.

Bhoon also claimed that more than 600 acres of land in the Golra revenue estate had been exempted. He told the court that there was a dispute over the area of the site, with the CDA claiming it measured 60 kanals while he maintained it was 35 kanals.

He requested the court to appoint a local commission to inspect the site and determine the facts.

Justice Azam Khan questioned whether the matter concerned the shrine or a residential property and asked about the status of the land in the revenue record.

Safe Medicine App Helps Pakistanis Spot Fake Medicines In Seconds

● DRAP's new mobile app lets you scan a barcode to check where your medicine comes from, its price and its expiry date

MUDASSAR IQBAL/WEB DESK

ISLAMABAD

Selling fake medicine in Pakistan is now much harder. People can now download the safe medicine app and check their medicines on their own, right from their phones.

The app works with the barcode printed on medicine packs. You just open the app and scan the barcode on the box. In a few seconds, the app shows where the medicine came from.

It also shows the price and the expiry date in simple words. This means you no longer have to guess if a medicine is real or how much it should cost.

The app uses easy colors to show results. If the medicine is fake or doubtful, your phone screen turns red. If the medicine is real and meets the required standard, a green sign appears.

This simple system helps everyone, even people who cannot read small labels or medical terms. One look at the screen tells you whether the medicine is safe to use.

The safe medicine app is not only for scanning. You can also use it to file complaints. If a medicine is not available in the market, you can report it through the app.

You can also report problems with quality. If a medicine looks strange, smells odd or does not work as it should, you can share your concern.

All complaints go straight to the Drug Regulatory Authority of Pakistan (DRAP). This means your voice reaches the right people without delay or extra steps.

Fake medicines are a serious threat to health. They can make illness worse and, in some cases, put lives at risk. This app gives ordinary people a strong tool to protect themselves and their families.

The Safe Medicine app is free to find on both the Google Play Store and the Apple App Store. Experts advise everyone to install it and scan their medicines before use.

A few seconds of checking can save you money, time and, most of all, your health.

Dr Adil Najam for clear decision-making rules & accountable climate finance

STAFF REPORTER

ISLAMABAD

Dr Adil Najam, Dean Emeritus at the Frederick S. Pardee School of Global Studies, Boston University has called for a fundamental rethink of how UN climate conferences are run and judged, seeking clearer decision-making rules and accountable climate finance.

He was speaking at a special talk, "Conversation with Dr Adil Najam: From Antalya to Islamabad in a World in Flux," organized by Sustainable Development Policy Institute (SDPI) here on Thursday, said a press release.

Dr Najam, who is also the President of Wold Wildlife Fund (WWF) International, said a successful Conference of the Parties (COP) is not simply one that ends with a signed document. The real question, he argued, is whether an agreement carries meaningful substance. He said many past COPs ended with papers that meant little, and that in his view the Paris Agreement was the last outcome that amounted to a genuine legal document.

He urged participants to remember what a COP is: a Conference of the Parties to a legal framework convention. That legal character, he said, has been forgotten as the event has grown into a large public spectacle with too many spectators. The framework approach was designed so that countries could build binding law step by step through protocols without waiting for perfect science.

Dr Najam said calls to reform the process are not all equal.

The Federal Investigation Agency (FIA) Immigration on Thursday offloaded a female passenger at Multan Airport who was attempting to travel to Saudi Arabia for Umrah using allegedly fake documents.

The passenger, identified as Nadia Kanwal, was scheduled to travel to Saudi Arabia on flight PF-702.

According to initial investigations, Nadia introduced herself as a married woman during the immigration clearance process. However, discrepancies in her statements and suspicious documents prompted immigration officials to refer her record to the National Database and Registration Authority (NADRA) for verification.

Subsequent verification reportedly revealed that the woman had attempted to travel to Saudi Arabia in connivance with an agent and that the man she had identified as her husband was not her actual spouse.

According to the Integrated Border Management System (IBMS) record, her real husband lives in Pakistan and has never travelled abroad.

The FIA handed the woman over to its Anti-Human Trafficking Circle in Multan for further interrogation and legal proceedings.

Federal Minister for Finance and Revenue Senator Muhammad Aurangzeb on Thursday met a delegation of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), led by Resident Representative Samuel Rizk, to discuss Pakistan's development priorities, climate finance opportunities and enhanced cooperation with development partners.

Senior Ministry of Finance officials also attended the meeting, according to a press release issued by finance ministry.

The UNDP delegation highlighted Pakistan's progress in developing a pipeline of potential investments aligned with national development and climate priorities.

The portfolio brings together projects from the SDG Investment Pipeline, Climate Prosperity Plans and other climate adaptation initiatives.

It comprises a range of projects covering clean energy and infrastructure, climate resilience, water and food security, ecosystems, and circular economy initiatives.

The UNDP noted that the portfolio could serve as a starting point for identifying investment opportunities and mobilising resources.

The discussion focused on prioritising technically sound, investment-ready projects capable of delivering tangible results within a shorter timeframe.

On the occasion, the Finance Minister underscored the importance of aligning the initiative with national priorities and concrete development outcomes. He emphasised that the next phase should focus on a carefully selected portfolio of projects with clear implementation pathways and the potential to demonstrate timely progress.

The Minister highlighted the importance of close coordination and stakeholder consultation to ensure that the initiative remains aligned with national priorities, drawing on relevant institutional expertise and mandates.

He observed that climate finance requires a coordinated approach to project development, financing and implementation. He emphasised the need to build on existing project pipelines, engage relevant stakeholders and identify opportunities to accelerate projects already under consideration by multilateral development partners.

The Minister also stressed the importance of making effective use of available financing opportunities, including concessional resources, climate funds and private-sector investment, while recognising the time required to mobilise international finance. He called for a focused and manageable set of priority projects.

The UNDP outlined its proposed support in refining the portfolio, undertaking a diagnostic assessment, facilitating project preparation and engaging with global climate financing mechanisms.

The discussion also covered blended finance and public-private partnerships, particularly in areas such as renewable energy, waste management, recycling and climate-smart agriculture.

The meeting also considered lessons from recent climate-induced disasters and the importance of strengthening long-term resilience through institutional preparedness, disaster risk reduction and enhanced institutional capacity.

Trump Proposes New Tariffs Of 40% On China, 35% On Vietnam, 25% On India

● China, India, Japan and the EU face new duties of up to 40%, while markets slide and partners push back

WEB DESK

WASHINGTON

Trump proposes new tariffs on 14 major trading partners, including China, Japan, India and the European Union. The plan was announced, November 25.

The President blames unfair trade practices and excess factory output abroad. His party's losses in the midterm elections have not slowed his trade push.

The headline tariff rates range from 20% to 40%. However, the administration says duties will be capped at lower levels set under current or pending trade deals.

China faces the highest capped rate at 20%. This comes on top of the roughly 25% in duties from Trump's first term. The rate matches the current US-China trade truce, which ends on January 10. If the truce collapses, the rate could jump to 40%.

Vietnam would pay 20% if it signs a trade deal with the US, or 35% if it does not. India would pay 17% if talks succeed, or 25% if they fail.

Japan, South Korea, Taiwan, the EU and Switzerland would each face 15%. Cambodia, Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand and Bangladesh would face 18%. Singapore gets the lowest rate at 10%.

US Trade Representative Jamieson Greer said the duties target industrial strategies built around dominating manufacturing. The tariffs are set to take effect after a public hearing on January 25.

China quickly rejected the claims. Foreign Ministry spokesperson Guo Jiakun called overcapacity a "false issue" and said Beijing opposes using it for political manipulation.

The European Commission also strongly denied that Europe has an overcapacity problem. It noted that tariffs on EU goods will stay capped at 15%, as agreed last year.

Brazil was handled separately. The US proposed a 10% duty on Embraer aircraft and higher duties on extra Brazilian sugar. Brazil was the only country investigated, while Mexico and Norway were left out.

Govt Proposes Fixing Fuel Adjustment At Rs0.83 For Three Months

● Power Division plans to cap the Fuel Cost Adjustment from October to December 2026 to protect consumers from rising global fuel costs

FINANCE REPORTER

ISLAMABAD

The govt proposes fixing fuel adjustment charges on electricity bills for three months, from October to December 2026. The Power Division announced the move on Thursday to protect people from the rising cost of international fuel.

Under the new plan, called the Forward-Looking Fuel Cost Adjustment (FFCA), the increase will stay at about Rs0.83 per unit, including taxes. This amount will be added on top of the September 2026 FCA.

The Power Division said it will send policy guidelines to the National Electric Power Regulatory Authority (Nepra) once all approvals are in place. Nepra will then put the plan into action.

The goal is simple. The government wants electricity prices to be more stable and easier to predict. It also hopes to shield consumers, especially businesses, from sudden fuel price shocks.

Tariffs Had Been Falling

According to the Power Division, the average electricity tariff was Rs53.04 per unit when the current government took charge in March 2024. By March 2026, it had dropped by Rs8.76 to Rs44.28 per unit.

Industrial users saw an even bigger cut. Their tariff fell by Rs18.49, from Rs62.99 to Rs44.50 per unit, over the same period.

War Pushed Fuel Prices Up

Things changed after the Iran-US war and the energy crisis that followed in the Middle East. Prices of LNG and coal jumped sharply, which pushed monthly FCAs higher.

The Power Division said it saved consumers from an extra FCA rise of Rs6 to Rs7 per unit between April and September 2026. This was done through better fuel use and a public load management plan. As a result, the combined FCA and Quarterly Tariff Adjustment increase was kept to an average of Rs2.38 per unit.

For Kashmiri women, violence cannot be understood only through domestic abuse or patriarchal discrimination. Decades of militarization have exposed them to allegations of sexual violence, intimidation, arbitrary detention and institutional injustice. Their experiences raise a fundamental question about the relationship between state power and human security.

One of the most troubling dimensions of Kashmir's conflict is the legacy of alleged sexual violence by security personnel. The Kunan-Poshpora incident of 23 February 1991, remains a painful incident. Women from two villages accused Indian soldiers of committing sexual assaults during a military operation. But the Indian Army and government denied these allegations. The United Nations Office of High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR, 2018) highlighted the case and the survivors' prolonged struggle for investigation and accountability. More than three decades later, the Kunan-Poshpora continues to raised questions about the treatment of survivors. This incident also illustrates how delayed justice can deepen the original trauma. When credible allegations involving state agents remain inadequately investigated. The consequences extend beyond individual survivors, undermining public confidence in institutions entrusted with protecting human dignity.

Legal structures further complicated the accountability. The Armed Forces Special Powers Act (AFSPA) of 1958 grants extraordinary powers to security personnel and requires central-government sanction for certain prosecutions. The United Nations Office of High Commissioner for Human Rights OHCHR (2019) identified such protections as significant obstacles for accountability. Meanwhile, the Public Safety Act (PSA) of 1978, also permits preventive detention. This law has raised questions over arbitrary detention and insufficient procedural safeguards.

Although these laws perform different functions but the report of UNHCR raised concerns about both laws, particularly their implications for accountability and individual liberties. Whether extraordinary security powers are accompanied by meaningful judicial oversight. National security cannot justify a system in which alleged violations become exceptionally difficult to investigate or prosecute. The consequences reach beyond physical violence. Surveillance, security raids, detentions, violation of basic rights and restrictions on civil freedoms can create an atmosphere of insecurity affecting women, familiesand communities.

After the April 2025 Pahalgam terrorist attack, widespread counter terrorism operations which again bought concerns about detentions and restrictions on civil liberties. The United Nations human-rights experts raised concerns about reported mass detentions, student surveillance and harassment during subsequent counterterrorism operations. While governments have a legitimate responsibility to investigate terrorism and protect civilians. Security responses must remain consistent with human-rights obligations. The collective suspicion risks transforming entire communities into subjects of permanent scrutiny.

However, portraying Kashmiri women exclusively as victims would overlook their political agency and refused to remain silent. Women have organized campaigns, documented abuses and demanded accountability for disappeared relatives. Parveena Ahangar, associated with the Association of Parents of Disappeared Persons, represented the struggle of countless women for truth and recognition. Niharika Pandit's research in Feminist Theory (2023) highlights how women's activism challenges dominant narratives of conflict and creates political spaces for marginalized voices. Their resistance demonstrates that women are not passive observers of Kashmir's political circumstances although they are active participants in shaping demands for justice.

Kashmiri women confront with deeply rooted patriarchal pressures. Sexual violence can carry social stigma. While economic dependency and restricted mobility may discourage survivors from seeking legal remedies. Research published in International Studies Review (2024) examines how militarization and patriarchy intersect in Kashmiri women's everyday lives. This double burden exposes the limitations of approaches that treat violence against women as merely a private or domestic concern. Protecting women requires confronting both discriminatory social practices and abuses of institutional power.

Militarization and inequalities, leaving many women caught between societal pressures and an insecure political environment. Their experiences cannot be addressed through security policies alone. Security and accountability are not competing objectives. Lasting security depends upon public trust, impartial institutions and respect for fundamental rights.

As the world observes November 25 as women day against violence. So the Kashmiri women deserve more than expressions of sympathy. Their demands call for credible independent investigations, accessible legal remedies, protection for survivors and meaningful participation in decisions affecting their lives. International institutions should continue examining allegations impartially and demanding accountability.

Ultimately, the credibility of any state's commitment to women's rights must be judged by its willingness to investigate allegations against its own institutions. For Kashmiri women, justice should not remain a promise repeated every November. It must become a reality they can experience in their everyday lives. Justice must mean more than surviving conflict, it must mean living with dignity, freedom, and protection under the law.

Pakistan's Mineral Wealth: New Opportunities for Economic Growth and Global Investment

By Syed Mujtaba Rizwan

Pakistan is among the fortunate countries of the world, blessed with abundant natural resources and immense mineral wealth that offer tremendous opportunities for economic growth and prosperity. Vast reserves of gold, copper, coal, salt, precious stones, iron ore and several other valuable minerals are found across different regions of the country. Unfortunately, in the past, these resources could not be fully exploited due to inadequate planning, limited access to modern technology and insufficient investment. However, Pakistan is now making significant progress towards transforming its mineral resources into a powerful engine of economic stability, industrial development and international investment. In this regard, the successful organization of the Pakistan Minerals Investment Forum 2026 marks an important milestone.

The two-day Pakistan Minerals Investment Forum 2026 (PMIF26), held in Islamabad, concluded successfully, attracting considerable international attention. The participation of more than 10,000 individuals from over 60 countries highlighted the growing global interest in Pakistan's mineral sector. During the forum, 13 agreements were also concluded between Pakistani and international companies, reflecting the enormous potential of the country's mineral resources for global investors. This development has the potential to open new avenues for investment, technology transfer and economic cooperation in the years ahead.

The primary objective of the forum was to connect Pakistan's mineral resources with international investment, modern mining technologies and long-term economic development. The participation of investors, industry experts, relevant institutions and business representatives from different parts of the world transformed the event into an important international economic platform. Through this initiative, Pakistan conveyed a clear message to the international community that it is committed to developing its natural resources through organized, transparent and modern approaches.

Pakistan's mineral wealth is not merely a gift of nature; it is a valuable national asset that can transform the country's economic future through wise planning and effective management. The extensive mineral reserves of Balochistan, precious stones found in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa and Gilgit-Baltistan, mineral resources in various parts of Punjab and natural deposits in other regions demonstrate that Pakistan possesses enormous opportunities to develop a strong mineral-based economy.

Can New Provinces Build A Stronger Pakistan?

For a farmer in South Punjab, the debate over new provinces comes down to whether a milk collection centre will open closer to his village. For a young worker in Faisalabad, it is whether an apprenticeship will lead to a skilled job. A small manufacturer in Karachi wants to know whether goods can reach the port on time. These are the tests by which Pakistan should judge any proposal to redraw its provincial boundaries.

A provincial government closer to its districts can better align schools, training and infrastructure with local needs. Pakistan should also encourage provinces to compete for investment, better jobs and better public services. When one province finds a policy that works, it should help others put it into practice. Both reforms can begin under the existing map.

Bring government closer to the people

Smaller provinces could make it easier to supervise public services and respond to local problems. But bringing the capital closer is only the beginning. Districts need staffed clinics, functioning schools and police stations with the resources to respond promptly. Smaller administrative units could also ease pressure on the courts if judicial resources follow demand. That means filling vacancies, adding capacity where caseloads are heavy and improving case management so families spend less time travelling and waiting for hearings.

If the same political families and local power brokers capture the new offices, Pakistan could create 200 provinces instead of 12 and still leave citizens facing the same problems. Elected governments should set priorities and answer to voters, while qualified professionals chosen on merit should manage health, education, public finance and other public services. Open recruitment, published budgets and regular performance reviews would give citizens a way to hold both their representatives and administrators to account.

What Pakistan can learn from China

After China began its reforms in 1978, provincial and municipal governments had room to experiment within a national reform programme. In Guangdong, Shenzhen became a special economic zone where China tested a wider opening to foreign investment and export manufacturing. Industrial clusters brought manufacturers, suppliers and skilled workers together. Other regions could adapt successful policies to their own circumstances.

Regional experimentation and competition helped China grow rapidly alongside agricultural reform, infrastructure investment and access to global markets. The Chinese experience also warns against duplicated industrial estates and debts incurred by local governments pursuing investment. Pakistan's elected provinces should have room to try different policies, with incentives tied to businesses operating, exports shipped and jobs sustained. India's use of state-level development and export indices offers a closer example of how a federal democracy can measure progress and share what works.

Build on what each region does well

Central Punjab should become an export manufacturing hub built around Lahore, Gujranwala and Sialkot. Gujranwala's engineering and metalworking businesses and Sialkot's surgical instruments, sports goods and leather products provide a starting point. Shared testing laboratories, reliable utilities and technical training can help smaller manufacturers qualify for overseas orders. A motorcycle glove maker in Sialkot, for example, could use a shared laboratory to test its products against a foreign buyer's specifications.

South Punjab should earn more from agriculture and livestock. Multan and surrounding districts can develop mango grading, modern packhouses and fruit processing. Dairy districts can link small farmers to milk chilling centres and processors. Meat exports require veterinary services, inspected slaughterhouses, dependable refrigeration and compliance with importing countries' standards.

FROM FIGHTER PILOT TO SPACE WALKER

A Pakistani falcon conquers a new frontier — from defending the nation's skies to carrying its dreams beyond the stars. There are moments when a nation's pride seems to rise beyond the limits of geography. On 25 November 2026, as Wing Commander Muhammad Zeeshan Ali stepped aboard China's Tiangong Space Station, Pakistan witnessed such a moment. A son of its soil, an accomplished Pakistan Air Force fighter pilot, had crossed a frontier few ever reach. He was the first Pakistani to enter Earth's orbit and the first foreign astronaut to board Tiangong. For millions watching, it was more than a spaceflight. It was the sight of a Pakistani flag entering a new domain of possibility.

Pakistan Air Force has built its reputation on a distinctive ethos: discipline, courage, professional mastery, intellectual curiosity and a resolve to turn challenges into opportunities. Its fighter pilots are shaped by demanding training, constant evaluation, with preparation as the foundation of confidence. They learn to make critical decisions in seconds, trust their teams and remain composed when the margin for error is almost zero. Those habits do not end at the edge of the atmosphere. The qualities demanded of a fighter pilot—precision under pressure, rapid judgement, technical fluency, teamwork and composure in uncertainty—are equally indispensable in space. Wg Cdr Zeeshan carried that training with him. His achievement reflects an institution that prepares its people for tomorrow's challenges. Under the leadership of Air Chief Marshal Zaheer Ahmed Baber Sidhu, PAF has placed renewed emphasis on modernization, technological self-reliance and the changing character of warfare. His strategic outlook recognises that air power can no longer be understood in isolation: cyber, electronic warfare, information networks, artificial intelligence and space-based capabilities increasingly shape the battlespace. The May 2025 conflict offered a sharp reminder of that reality. The contest was not confined to aircraft and missiles; it also unfolded across electronic and information domains. The world witnessed that PAF's offensive space capabilities disrupted Indian military satellite-linked systems. The strategic lesson is clear: future conflicts will be decided not only by what flies, but also by what can sense, connect, protect, disrupt and operate across multiple domains. Space is now consequential to national security.

Against this backdrop, Wg Cdr Zeeshan's selection for the Shenzhou-24 mission carries significance well beyond the symbolism of a launch. Selected under the Pakistan-China human-spaceflight cooperation programme, he undertook seven months of intensive preparation in China. Training covered spacecraft and station systems, specialised operations, scientific payloads, emergency response, crew coordination and malfunction procedures. In space, every checklist and decision must be mastered before the moment arrives. There was another demanding frontier: language. Zeeshan immersed himself in Mandarin, learning mission-related commands and technical vocabulary so he could communicate clearly with Chinese crewmates. He also embraced the culture around him, learning Chinese songs and poetry and practising calligraphy. It was practical preparation for teamwork and safe operations, where communication can be as vital as technology.

At his press interaction before launch, Wg Cdr Zeeshan spoke in Chinese about the enduring friendship between Pakistan and China. He read Chinese poetry and described the mission not as an individual triumph but as a journey representing 250 million Pakistanis. His words bridged two nations and gave the occasion its emotional centre. Then came the moment that will live in Pakistan's national memory. After Shenzhou-24 docked with Tiangong, Zeeshan stepped inside the station as its first foreign astronaut. He recited Allama Muhammad Iqbal's immortal verse: "Sitaron se aagay jahan aur bhi hain." Iqbal's Shaheen, forever restless and unwilling to accept the limits of the familiar sky, had found a new expression in a Pakistani air warrior orbiting Earth.

The mission is also a beginning, not a finish line. It demonstrates what becomes possible when national institutions, scientific talent and international partnerships converge around a long-term ambition. As a payload specialist, Wg Cdr Zeeshan is participating in joint scientific work, including experiments in biotechnology and materials science. This work can strengthen Pakistan's research ecosystem and inspire young people towards science and innovation. The challenge now is to turn this moment into sustained capability through education, research, indigenous technology and cooperation.

A fighter pilot is trained to protect the skies above his homeland. An astronaut reminds us that those skies are only the beginning. Wg Cdr Zeeshan Ali has carried the discipline of PAF, the warmth of Pakistan-China friendship and the hopes of a nation into orbit. His journey tells every child looking up at the night sky that ambition need not stop at the horizon. Pakistan's falcon has flown higher than ever before. The stars are no longer just distant points of light; they are invitations. And this time, Pakistan has answered.

AI Could Improve Interoperability Of NATO Weapons Systems: Commander

NEWS DESK

ISLAMABAD

Artificial intelligence could help NATO forces improve communication and information-sharing between their weapons systems, a senior alliance commander said on Wednesday.

NATO Supreme Allied Commander Transformation, French Admiral Pierre Vandier, said AI was already changing the way wars were fought and could help military forces process vast amounts of information while enhancing interoperability.

"For NATO, it's extraordinary news because now we run AI interoperability," Vandier told reporters at NATO headquarters in Brussels.

He said the technology could improve compatibility between different allied combat systems, allowing them to exchange information beyond their existing standards.

"We already have the technology. What we lack is the ability to share classified data at scale," he added.

Vandier said AI was already helping Ukrainian forces identify targets and monitor battlefield activity, potentially reducing reliance on human intelligence.

"You can see, if a leaf moves, if it's a rabbit, or if it's a soldier," he said.

He added that AI-powered drones could now navigate independently without requiring remote control by human operators.

Warning that the fastest developers of the technology would gain a decisive advantage, Vandier identified cloud computing as a major challenge.

He said partnerships with online data service providers such as Microsoft, Oracle and Google were essential for AI operations but raised concerns about protecting confidential information.

"Having the secret on commercial cloud is a big issue," the admiral said.

He explained that AI could help NATO allies share only the information necessary for joint operations while concealing sensitive data and maintaining military cooperation.

India's main opposition party sues Meta, alleging censorship

NEWS DESK

MUMBAI

India's main opposition party is suing Meta and Prime Minister Narendra Modi's government for alleged censorship on social media, party officials told AFP on Thursday.

Platforms like Meta's Facebook and Instagram are required in India to use automated tools to detect and restrict content identical to that which has previously been taken down.

The Congress party argues that those rules are being used as a pretext to block other content, including its own political material, that is completely lawful.

Its petition, filed at the Delhi High Court, challenges the rules' legality and Meta's implementation of them across its platforms.

Among other claims, it alleges that Meta has "arbitrarily restricted" posts carrying the name or photograph of senior party leader Rahul Gandhi, Modi's main challenger.

"The petition seeks restoration of restricted Facebook and Instagram posts, disclosure of government orders and the criteria used by Meta's automated censorship system," said Manu Jain, the Congress youth wing official who filed the petition.

It "essentially seeks to protect the fundamental right to freedom of speech and expression", Jain told AFP.

The court has yet to set a date for the hearing.

The filing follows days of protests by Congress workers over alleged political bias in Meta's content moderation.

Pakistan-China Friendship Has Reached Beyond Earth Into Space: PM Shehbaz

● Pakistan's First Astronaut's Space Journey Reflects National Pride, Says Prime Minister

STAFF REPORTER

ISLAMABAD

Chinese Ambassador to Pakistan Jiang Zaidong called on Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif at the Prime Minister's House on Thursday, where the premier congratulated China on the successful launch of the Shenzhou-24 space mission carrying Pakistan's first astronaut, Muhammad Zeeshan Ali, to the Tiangong Space Station.

During the meeting, the prime minister extended his congratulations to the Chinese ambassador, leadership and people on the successful launch of the historic mission from the Jiuquan Satellite Launch Centre on November 25.

Shehbaz Sharif expressed Pakistan's gratitude to its close ally China for providing the opportunity to participate in the landmark space mission, which has enabled a Pakistani astronaut to become the first foreign astronaut to visit China's space station.

The prime minister said the achievement represented much more than the journey of an individual astronaut, describing it as a collective accomplishment of 240 million Pakistanis. He said the mission reflected the hopes and ambitions of the country's younger generation and scientific community.

He termed the historic development a reflection of the strong and enduring friendship between Pakistan and China, adding that cooperation between the two countries had now reached beyond the Earth and into space.

The premier appreciated Chinese institutions for providing training to both Pakistani astronauts and acknowledged the contributions of SUPARCO, academic institutions, scientists and the armed forces in making the achievement possible.

He said the successful mission would encourage Pakistani youth to pursue ambitious goals in science and technology and inspire them to set their sights on the Moon and beyond.

Shehbaz Sharif also requested the Chinese ambassador to convey his warm greetings and best wishes to Chinese President Xi Jinping and Premier Li Qiang.

Eastern Libya Leader Haftar Visits Erdogan In Ankara As Ties Improve

● Former rivals shake hands as Turkey works to build ties with both sides of divided Libya

WEB DESK

ANKARA

Eastern Libya leader Haftar met Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan in Ankara. The meeting shows a big change in ties between the two men, who were once bitter enemies.

This was Khalifa Haftar's first official trip to Turkey. During Libya's civil war, Turkey stood with the UN-backed government in Tripoli and fought against Haftar's eastern forces.

Now, things look very different. Over the past few years, Ankara has tried to build closer links with key leaders on both sides of the divided country.

Photos released by Erdogan's office showed the president with Haftar and his team. His son Saddam Haftar, widely seen as his future successor, was also there. Video clips showed the two leaders sharing a friendly handshake.

The talks were held behind closed doors, and Erdogan's office gave no details. Before that meeting, Haftar also sat down with Turkey's foreign minister, energy minister, intelligence chief and top military officials.

Haftar's office said both sides discussed regional and world events. They also looked at ways to grow cooperation in many sectors that would benefit both nations.

A Look Back at a Tense Past

Libya has faced deep unrest since the 2011 uprising that ended Muammar Gaddafi's long rule. In 2019, Haftar's forces tried to take Tripoli. Turkey stepped in and sent armed drones that helped push the attack back.

In 2020, Erdogan even called Haftar "a mercenary." He also blamed the UAE and Egypt for funding him. Since then, Turkey has mended ties with many regional players.

Turkey's Role in Reunifying Libya

In October, Turkey hosted talks between Haftar's camp and the Tripoli government. It is one of very few countries that talks with both sides. On November 12, Erdogan also met Tripoli Prime Minister Abdulhamid Dbeibah in Antalya.

Also in October, Libya's eastern parliament approved a disputed sea border deal signed with Turkey in 2019. The European Union and several Mediterranean states criticized the move.

Rising Tensions in Benghazi

Haftar's visit came just three days after Ukraine attacked two Russian ships near Benghazi. Ukraine said a Russian warship, the Merkury, blew up and sank, while a cargo ship was also hit. Kyiv claimed Russia was moving weapons.

The Tripoli government has asked Ukraine to explain the attack. Eastern officials want an international probe. Haftar keeps close ties with Moscow, while Turkey continues to mediate between Russia and Ukraine.

Cairo Highway Fire: 31 Dead As Fuel Truck Overturns, Torching Dozens Of Vehicles

● A petroleum truck crashed and burst into flames on Cairo's busy Ring Road, trapping passing cars and leaving 21 people injured

WEB DESK

EGYPT

A deadly Cairo highway fire killed at least 30 people and injured 21 others. The blaze started after a truck carrying petroleum products overturned on the city's busy Ring Road, Egypt's health ministry said.

The crash took place in the Al-Warraq area of Giza's Imbaba district. Flames quickly spread to several cars passing by at the time.

Videos shared by people nearby, and verified by AFP, showed huge flames and thick black smoke rising over the crowded area.

Quick Emergency Response

The health ministry sent 39 ambulances to the scene. The injured were rushed to nearby hospitals for treatment.

Photos showed burned cars lying along the road as firefighters worked to put out the fire around the overturned truck. A bulldozer was later used to clear away the remains of a destroyed vehicle.

Health Minister Khaled Abdel-Ghaffar followed the medical response closely. He told nearby hospitals to stay on high alert.

Prime Minister Mostafa Madbouly also spoke with senior ministers by phone. He asked officials to care for the injured and offer support and compensation to affected families. He also shared his sympathy with those who lost loved ones.

Investigation Underway

Egypt's Public Prosecution has opened an investigation. Forensic experts are checking the site to find the cause of the fire and measure the damage.

Early findings suggest the driver lost control of the truck. It hit a concrete barrier, flipped over, and caught fire. The flames then reached nearby vehicles.

Local media said the truck was privately owned and was traveling from the Marg district toward Al-Warraq. Officials have also spoken with injured survivors.

Traffic Disruption

The Cairo highway fire caused heavy traffic on the Ring Road. Bus Rapid Transit services along the route were also affected. The BRT operator said it had taken emergency steps to keep buses running.

A Wider Road Safety Problem

Road crashes are common in Egypt. They are often blamed on reckless driving, poor vehicle care, and weak traffic law enforcement.

Nearly 6,000 people died in road accidents in Egypt last year, according to state data.

Nepal moves to declare dead those still missing after August floods

NEWS DESK

NEPAL

Nepal has begun a process to legally declare dead thousands of people still missing after its catastrophic summer floods, authorities said Thursday, three months after the disaster.

A high-altitude glacier on the Nepal-China border collapsed on August 26, unleashing a torrent of water, ice, rock and debris.

In Nepal, the floods killed more than 1,400 people and left over 5,500 missing.

"We have started the process to declare the missing dead by verifying their details," Ram Bahadur KC, spokesman for the disaster management authority, told AFP.

Authorities have issued public notices naming about 4,000 missing people, including 623 foreign nationals, and asked for objections or corrections before formal declarations are made.

Additional names can be added following further verification, with the government expected to issue death declarations once legal procedures are completed.

The move follows a change in Nepal's laws last month, reducing the waiting period to declare disaster victims dead from 12 years to around six weeks.

Values are found in the consistency between what we say and what we do, especially when upholding those things becomes difficult." Outgoing titleholder Fátima Bosch of Mexico was on stage to crown her successor.

In a dramatic finish, Melissa Núñez of the Dominican Republic was named first runner-up, while Venezuela's Clara Vegas claimed the second runner-up spot.

While the event celebrated historic milestones for both Barreto and the host nation, the competition unfolded amid behind-the-scenes organizational disputes that notably resulted in the absence of six Southeast Asian contestants. Despite the off-stage turbulence, the milestone broadcast drew massive local support as Barreto secured a landmark victory for her country and modern pageantry.

Shafqat Amanat Ali on carrying his family's musical legacy and forging his own path

SHOWBIZ REPORTER

KARACHI

Shafqat Amanat Ali says carrying his family's musical legacy is a responsibility he takes immense pride in, adding that it has made him more conscious of his work and the expectations attached to his name. The singer believes that representing a family with such a rich musical history means not only honouring its achievements but also raising the bar for the generations that follow.

In a recent interview with Fuchsia Magazine, Ali opened up about his musical upbringing, the lessons he inherited from his grandparents, the pressure of belonging to a celebrated musical family and the personal choices that shaped his career. He also spoke about his journey towards becoming an independent artist, his popular song Aankhon Ke Sagar, the making of Mitwa and the health struggles that affected his ability to perform.

"Whether I want to or not, I am representing my family," Ali said, explaining how he viewed his association with a renowned musical lineage. "It is not that I do not like that this is the case. It is something I am proud of. But as they say, great powers come with great responsibilities."

Elaborating on what this meant for him as an artist, Ali spoke about the standards he believed came with carrying a family name and the example he hoped to set for younger musicians. "It makes you more responsible and more careful. If you have done your homework and know what you are doing, you feel more responsible to raise the bar for the upcoming generation," he said.

For Ali, his relationship with music began long before he entered the industry professionally.

Sahar Hashmi highlights dangers young girls face in post appreciating 'Dar-e-Nijaat' team

● Actor reflects on innocence, exploitation and adults' responsibility to create a safer world for children

LAHORE

Actor Sahar Hashmi has spoken about the vulnerability of young girls growing up with limited awareness of the dangers around them, reflecting on the themes of innocence, exploitation and adult responsibility explored through her character in Dar-e-Nijaat.

In a behind-the-scenes video shared on Instagram, featuring footage of her in character, Hashmi expressed gratitude for the appreciation she had received for her performance and acknowledged the cast and crew who had supported her throughout the production.

Looking back on her experience of bringing the character to life, the actor began by thanking viewers for their response to her performance and the people who had helped her along the way.

"I wanted to take a moment to thank everyone for all the love and appreciation coming my way. I truly believe it takes a village to bring a story to life and bring out the best in a character," she wrote. She also hinted at the developments awaiting viewers in the coming episodes, adding: "Trust me, you're all in for quite a ride."

Hashmi also discussed the period the drama seeks to portray, drawing attention to the social circumstances and experiences that shaped the lives of young girls at the time.

"We've tried to capture the innocence, naivety and romance of the '90s, a time when young girls were growing up with so little exposure, unaware of the dangers lurking around them, only to fall prey to people who took advantage of that innocence and trust," she wrote.

Beyond the period setting, the actor pointed to a larger concern that she hoped the drama would bring into focus, particularly when it came to the role adults played in shaping children's lives.

"More than anything, I hope stories like these remind us of the responsibility we carry as adults. May we grow into the kind of adults we perhaps needed when we were younger, and create a safer, kinder world for the generations growing up after us," she added.

Hashmi also acknowledged the people who had helped shape her performance, giving a special mention to her co-stars and the creative team behind the production.

Among her co-stars, she singled out Sheheryar Munawar, who plays Abu Bakar, for the support he had extended on set. "A special shoutout to Sherry for always being the easiest and most helpful co-actor," she wrote.

LONDON

The Hunger Games movies have now caught up with the books, as Suzanne Collins has not written or introduced the next installment in the franchise as of yet, but the producer shared how she might alter the series.

Nina Jacobson revealed that despite the love for the Mockingjay films, which were split into part one and part two, she would have liked to combine them into one movie.

"Even though I love the Mockingjay films, if I had it to do over again, I think both Francis [Lawrence] and I might try to do it all in one. Mockingjay was such a big book, and it takes you to so many different places. But in the end, I think that Francis and I both felt that splitting them up… even if it did come from an inside-out place of really feeling like we needed two films to tell the story, I think audiences find it cynical," Jacobson said in an interview.

She continued, "Even if its intentions are earnest, which they were. They feel like it's a play to make them see two films instead of one."

Fans reacted to the suggestion on social media, writing, "splitting it was the right choice. people complain that Mockingjay Part 1 was boring but i think if they added a few more scenes and made the finale stronger it wouldn't have been a big problem."

Another reasoned, "I see both sides of the argument. Is it an overly long book that could fit into one film? Yes. At the same time, splitting it kinda made sense. Each half of the book is a very different story and where they split it is where that change happens, so it also made sense."

A third chimed in, "they can do 10 parts I'd still watch this saga give me every page detail on screen."

While one suggested, "If they had a chance to redo films they should also add in Madge I'm sure they felt like they didn't have time but she's not like a small part of the story at all and she just gets more relevant with sunrise on the reaping. Not keeping Madge is probably their biggest mistake," and "diva what… it was the right choice… sotr should've been two films as well," added another.

Mishi Khan roasts Hania Aamir's stylist over her Netflix launch look

SHOWBIZ REPORTER

KARACHI

Pakistani actress Mishi Khan has taken a sharp dig at Hania Aamir's stylist over the actress's outfit at the launch of Jo Bachay Hain Sang Samait Lo in Karachi.

Reacting to Hania's red-carpet appearance, Mishi left a blunt comment on Instagram, writing, "Her stylist should be sent to Timbuktu."

Hania Aamir attended the trailer and music launch of Pakistan's first Netflix Original series at Karachi's historic Mohatta Palace on November 24. The event brought together several prominent stars from the entertainment industry to celebrate the upcoming series.

For the occasion, Hania opted for a custom-made lilac ensemble by Taali AE. Her outfit featured a floor-length gown with a fitted silhouette, full-length sleeves and a dramatic cape-style train flowing from her shoulders.

The neckline was framed with delicate embellishments, while additional detailing around the waist and front added to the overall look. She completed her appearance with sleek, middle-parted hair, subtle makeup and minimal jewellery.

However, the outfit did not seem to impress Mishi Khan. Commenting on an Instagram post featuring Hania's appearance, the actress wrote, "Her stylist should be sent to Timbuktu," followed by grimacing emojis.

Mishi's remark was a pointed criticism of the styling rather than a direct comment on Hania herself. Timbuktu, a city in Mali, is often used figuratively to refer to a distant or remote place.

Through her sarcastic comment, Mishi appeared to suggest that Hania's stylist had made a poor choice in putting the look together.

Pakistan drew 5-5 with hosts Malaysia in the Azlan Shah Hockey Cup on Thursday in Malaysia. The match was high-scoring, but the result was not enough for Pakistan to reach the final. Pakistan still could not secure a place in the title match despite avoiding defeat against the home side.

The high-scoring encounter kept fans on the edge of their seats as both teams traded goals throughout the match. The result proved enough for Malaysia to advance to the final on goal difference, while Pakistan's hopes of reaching the title match came to an end.

Malaysia's star performer was Faizal Saari, who delivered a hat-trick and provided an assist in a standout display. His decisive contribution came in the 57th minute when he converted a penalty stroke to level the score at 5-5 and secure the crucial point for the hosts.

Pakistan also produced an impressive attacking performance. Ahmad Nadeem scored twice, while Sufyan Khan added a penalty-corner goal as Pakistan repeatedly challenged the Malaysian defense.

PCB Announces Fixtures For Ireland's Maiden Tour Of Pakistan

● Ireland will play six white-ball matches at Lahore's Gaddafi Stadium, including a three-match ODI series against Pakistan

SPORTS REPORTER

LAHORE

The PCB announces the full schedule for Ireland's first-ever tour of Pakistan. The Pakistan Cricket Board shared the details on Thursday. The tour will include six white-ball matches in January.

Ireland will land in Lahore on January 9. This will be a historic trip for the Irish side, as they have never toured Pakistan before.

The visitors will start with three one-day matches against Pakistan Shaheens. These games will be played between January 13 and January 17.

After that, Ireland will face the main Pakistan team in a three-match One-Day International (ODI) series.

The ODI series will run from January 20 to January 24.

All six matches will take place at the famous Gaddafi Stadium in Lahore. Every game will be a day match. The PCB will share the exact match timings soon.

This tour is a great chance for Ireland. Their players will gain useful experience in Pakistani conditions before a busy international season.

Pakistan will go into the series full of confidence. Last month, they won the ODI tri-series at home. Under the captaincy of Shaheen Shah Afridi, the Green Shirts lifted the trophy after beating strong sides like England and Sri Lanka. That event was held in Rawalpindi and Lahore.

Past records also favour Pakistan. The two teams have played seven ODIs against each other. Pakistan have won five of those games. Ireland have won only once, while one match ended in a tie.

In T20 Internationals, Pakistan are also ahead. They lead Ireland 4-1 in five completed matches.

Fans in Lahore can look forward to some exciting cricket in the new year. The tour will also be another big step for international cricket in Pakistan.

Noor Ahmad's Four-Wicket Haul Spins Dubai Capitals To First Win

● Capitals bounce back from their opening loss with a 45-run win, as Noor's spin breaks the Vipers' chase on a slow Dubai pitch

SPORTS DESK

DUBAI

Noor Ahmad was the hero for Dubai Capitals as they beat Desert Vipers by 45 runs in the ILT20. The young spinner took four wickets for just 20 runs and helped his side defend 164 on a slow and tricky Dubai pitch.

This was a strong comeback for Capitals, who had lost their first game of the season.

Vipers chose to bowl first, and Capitals made a shaky start. Masood Gurbaz was run out in the very first over, leaving the score at 6 for 1.

Max Holden then fell to Shadab Khan just after the Powerplay, and Capitals were 45 for 2. Faf du Plessis scored 24 from 30 balls before Nangeyalia Kharoti had him stumped.

Sam Billings and Marcus Stoinis then took charge. The pair added 59 runs and gave the innings some much-needed shape.

Billings was the top scorer with 43 off 31 balls, while Stoinis made 27 off 24. Both fell late in the innings to Khuzaima Tanveer, who ended with 3 for 38.

Rovman Powell gave the total a late push. He hit two fours and two sixes in a quick 28 off 12 balls, taking Capitals to 164 for 7.

The Vipers' chase started badly. Dushmantha Chameera removed Babar Azam for just 1 in the second over, with Faf du Plessis taking the catch at slip.

Fakhar Zaman made 12 before Mustafizur Rahman sent him back inside the Powerplay.

Muhammad Asim Khan Qualifies For CAS International Squash Championship Quarterfinals

SPORTS DESK

ISLAMABAD

Muhammad Asim Khan qualifies for the quarterfinals of the CAS International Squash Championship 2026. He was the only Pakistani player to win on day 2 of the event.

Asim beat Egypt's Adham Roshdy 3-1 in a match that lasted 58 minutes. He took the first game 11-7 and looked calm and sharp from the start.

Roshdy hit back in the second game and won it 11-5. But Asim did not lose focus. He came back with power and won the next two games 11-4 and 11-7 to seal the win.

It was a tough day for the rest of the Pakistani players. Four of them lost their Round 2 matches and are now out of the event.

The biggest shock came when top seed Noor Zaman lost to Egypt's Hazem Hossam. The match went to five games and lasted 51 minutes. Hossam won 11-6, 8-11, 9-11, 11-4, 11-5.

Hamza Khan also lost a close five-game match. Malaysia's Yee Xian Siow beat him 3-2 in 57 minutes. The scores were 11-6, 11-7, 6-11, 3-11, 11-6.

Nauman Khan had no answer to Egypt's Mohamed Gohar. Gohar won in straight games, 11-3, 11-7, 11-3, in just 27 minutes.

Nasir Iqbal's match ended early due to injury. Egypt's Marwan Assal was leading 11-7, 11-0 when Iqbal retired hurt after 13 minutes.

Bizarre WBBL Moment As Deandra Dottin Is Bowled Off A "Free Ball"

● Late to the crease, Dottin stood aside as Sarah Glenn hit the stumps, but the Melbourne Renegades still won on the last ball

SPORTS WEBDESK

MELBOURNE

Deandra Dottin was part of one of the strangest dismissals in WBBL 2026. The Melbourne Renegades star was given out off a "free ball" against the Brisbane Heat at Junction Oval.

It happened in the 15th over of the Renegades' run chase. The home side was 97/4, chasing a target of 138 runs.

Dottin was due to bat at No. 6. However, she did not reach the crease in time.

Under the WBBL Timed Out rule, which was changed before the 2021-22 season, the new batter must be ready to face the ball within 75 seconds of the last wicket.

If the batter is late, there is a penalty. She has to stand to the side of the pitch, at least 5 metres away on the leg side, for the first ball. The bowler is then free to bowl at the open stumps.

That is exactly what happened. Dottin stood near square leg while Heat spinner Sarah Glenn bowled. The ball hit the unguarded stumps, and Dottin was out bowled for a duck.

The good news for the Renegades was that the wicket did not cost them the game. They chased down the 138-run target on the very last ball. It was their fourth win of the season.

Captain Sophie Molineux was named Player of the Match after taking four wickets. After the game, she spoke openly about the mix-up.

She admitted the team was a little late in telling Dottin to pad up and walk out. Still, she saw it as a useful lesson.

"It was something I had never seen before in cricket," Molineux said at the post-match presentation.

She also praised the Heat bowler. "Hats off to Glenny for executing that," she said.

Molineux added that it was a good lesson for her side and for every other team watching. She also joked that fans may not see another one like it for ten years.

For now, Deandra Dottin's odd exit will be one of the most talked-about moments of the WBBL 2026 season.

CJP meets Lahore Bar representatives, highlights Public Facilitation Centre at Lahore Branch Registry

STAFF REPORTER

ISLAMABAD

Representatives of the Lahore Bar Association and the Lahore High Court Bar Association called on the Chief Justice of Pakistan, Justice Yahya Afridi, at the Lahore Branch Registry of the Supreme Court of Pakistan Thursday.

The delegation included Babar Murtaza Khan, President of the Lahore High Court Bar Association, Malik Ali Raza Khokhar, Advocate and Finance Secretary of the Lahore High Court Bar Association, and Malik Tanveer, Advocate.

During the meeting, the Chief Justice and the Bar representatives discussed matters of mutual interest, including ways to strengthen cooperation between the Bar and the Bench, facilitate litigants and support the smooth conduct of court proceedings. The representatives assured the Chief Justice of their full support and cooperation in advancing these shared objectives.

The Chief Justice informed the Bar leadership that a Public Facilitation Centre had been established at the Lahore Branch Registry to improve access to court services for all litigants and lawyers. He said that the Centre would provide all 35 services available at the Public Facilitation Centre of the Supreme Court in Islamabad, following the same one-window model.

The Centre will give litigants and lawyers a single point of access to court-related information, procedural guidance and assistance with service requests. By bringing these services under one roof, the Centre will make it easier for court users to obtain timely assistance, navigate court procedures and complete routine formalities with fewer visits to different counters.

The Chief Justice welcomed the Bar representatives' assurance of support and assured them of the Bench's full cooperation in matters concerning the administration of justice.

He emphasised the importance of regular dialogue and close coordination between the Bar and the Bench in addressing practical difficulties faced by court users and ensuring the smooth and efficient administration of justice.

Interior Minister Mohsin Naqvi has laid the foundation stone of a new Convention Centre in Islamabad, 24NewsHD TV reported on Thursday. The centre will have a convention hall, two head-of-state lounges and two VIP lounges.

Speaking at the event, Naqvi called the project a test for him and his team. He said a strategy is ready and the work for each day has already been planned.

He said formal work will begin on November 28 and the project will be completed before next year's Shanghai Cooperation Organisation (SCO) conference. He added that today is not just a groundbreaking, but the start of a test.

The new centre will be 180 feet wide and able to host major exhibitions. Along with it, the existing Jinnah Convention Centre will be fully renovated. The project therefore has two main parts: the new convention and expo centre, and the renovation of the Jinnah Convention Centre.

Naqvi said machinery and other arrangements will be brought to the site over the next two days. Construction will formally start on the 28th or 29th. Chalawein Roti keeps South Punjab's centuries-old wedding culture alive

STAFF REPORTER

MULTAN

At a time when extravagant wedding halls, lavish buffets and glittering celebrations have increasingly become symbols of social prestige, an age-old tradition in the villages of South Punjab continues to tell a different story one in which a simple meal, shared responsibilities and neighbourhood solidarity matter more than grandeur and display.

Known as Chalawein Roti, this distinctive wedding custom transforms a family celebration into a community-wide occasion, bringing food to the doorsteps of neighbors and relatives while preserving the spirit of collective participation that has defined rural life for generations.

Unlike conventional wedding receptions, where hundreds of guests gather under one roof, Chalawein Roti follows a remarkably simple yet meaningful arrangement.

The bridegroom's family prepares food at home, while households across the village bring their own cooking pots and utensils to collect meals according to the number of their family members.

The practice ensures that almost every household becomes part of the festivities, even without attending a formal reception.

Arrangements are generally settled in advance between the wedding family and participating households, while relatives and guests arriving from distant areas are welcomed into the wedding home and served with traditional hospitality.

Food is also delivered to nearby relatives who cannot collect it themselves.

The enduring custom was recently witnessed in Chak Inam Wala, a rural locality on the outskirts of Multan, where a wedding family prepared and distributed meals among nearly 50 households, demonstrating how an inherited tradition continues to flourish despite changing social trends.

Muhammad Javed, brother of the bridegroom, told APP that Chalawein Roti was deeply embedded in the area's cultural fabric and had been observed by local families for generations.

"We do not arrange wedding receptions in marriage halls. Instead, we prepare food at home, and families with whom we have marriage and social ties bring their own utensils and collect meals according to the number of their household members," he said.

He explained that the village elders had also established a mutual understanding under which participating families contributed a fixed amount of money to the wedding household whenever the traditional arrangement was observed.

"This contribution helps reduce the financial burden on the wedding family to some extent. It is a collective arrangement based on mutual understanding and cooperation," he added.
